Leaders Scrap Further Oil Talks

Times News Services

OTTAWA - Provincial premiers failed today to reach agreement on oil prices, turning the question of the next increase over to Alberta and the federal government for further talks.

The premiers and Prime Minister Trudeau had attempted throughout a three-day federal-provincial economic conference to settle the question of a price increase among themselves.

At stake was an Alberta-Ottawa plan to delay a Jan. 1 increase of three-cents a gallon until July 1, adding a second increase in January, 1980, in return.

Alberta Energy Minister Don Getty, however, said in Edmonton that his province does not intend to enter new negotiations on energy pricing if agreement is not reached at the first ministers meeting.

Getty said Tuesday night he could not think of a good reason for the province to negotiate a second compromise after reaching agreement with the federal government on a plan to postpone a Jan. 1 increase in exchange for two increases later in the year.

The idea was attacked by a number of premiers as a political move that could benefit Trudeau during the remaining months before next year's general election. Federal officials estimated a $1-a-barrel increase in oil prices—that translates into the three-cent boost in gasoline and home heating prices—would add about seven-tenths of a percentage point to the inflation rate.

Ottawa and Premier Peter Lougheed of Alberta now face a decision whether to allow a Jan. 1 increase to go ahead or to impose their new pricing program.

Lougheed, whose province produces 85 per cent of the country's oil, says he is happy with either option.

On another energy font, the federal and Alberta governments agreed on principles for offering lower natural gas prices in new markets to expand use of the fuel in eastern Quebec and the Maritimes.

The lower prices would be available only to markets east of the Alberta border.

Meanwhile, Quebec and British Columbia made it clear at the conference Tuesday they're not prepared to turn over complete control of programs to shore up farm incomes to the federal government.

Don Phillips, B.C. development minister, said his province wants to be allowed to maintain its farm income insurance programs. B.C. farmers face higher operating costs than producers elsewhere, he said.

Quebec Agriculture Minister Jean Garon said provincial governments should have a role in deciding how farm income support programs will operate.

The other eight provinces have generally accepted a federal proposal to change the current farm income stabilization program to provide higher payments to farmers in times of low prices. It's a voluntary plan which farmers will have to pay into.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said later he is sure B.C. will join and the plan could operate without Quebec.

FLQ Pair 'Home For Christmas'

Jacques and Louise Cossette - Trudel

Times News Services

QUEBEC — Jacques and Louise Cossette-Trudel, wanted for the 1970 FLQ kidnapping of British trade commissioner James Cross, plan to be back in Quebec for Christmas, a government spokesman said today.

But the spokesman for Quebec Justice Minister Marc-Andre Bedard said the exact date of their return has not yet been set.

The couple are among five members of an FLQ cell who were flown to Cuba eight years ago in exchange for the release of Cross, who was held for 59 days.

The Cossette-Trudels, complaining of homesickness, have spoken of returning for several years.

In Ottawa, Andre Simard, an official of the external affairs department, was quoted as saying he had heard about the Cossette-Trudels' "intention to return," although he could not confirm any date.

The Quebec spokesman added that once the couple arrives at Montreal's Mirabel Airport Quebec justice department officials plan to formally lay charges against them arising from their alleged participation in the Cross kidnapping.

Within days after their arrival they will appear in court at which time a trial date will be set and they will find out whether they will be released on bail.

The Cossette-Trudels have been living in France with their two children for a number of years and first expressed the desire to come home about a year ago.

In a letter to a Montreal newspaper several weeks ago, they finally abandoned their long-standing demand for an amnesty, saying they were ready to stand trial.

The couple have warned that, although they are ready to face charges, they will refuse to inform or provide prosecution evidence against any other FLQ members in criminal cases.

There have been reports—as yet unconfirmed—that Cross, his wife and his maid have all identified a photograph of Mr. X, naming him as one of the kidnappers.

Lougheed Inquiry Rejected

EDMONTON (CP) — Attorney-General Jim Foster said Tuesday no investigation will be made into Premier Peter Lougheed's free flights on Air Canada and CP Air because there is no evidence the flights were given or accepted in return for favors to the airlines by the government.

Lougheed admitted Monday he had accepted some free flights by the two national airlines and used them to take vacations.

Meanwhile, Alberta New Democratic Party leader Grant Notley has proposed legislation specifically banning MLAs, cabinet ministers and the premier from accepting gifts.

Notley said the Saskatchewan government has legislation governing the acceptance of gifts by elected officials and a similar New Brunswick law is due to take force soon.

B.C.'s Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said Tuesday his government does not have any rules against ministers accepting free trips on airlines.

He said he would find it inappropriate to accept a free trip from an airline for holiday purposes, but does not feel accepting free trips leaves a politician open to pressure from airlines.

The provincial secretary's ministry confirmed Tuesday that all members of the B.C. legislature are issued free passes by the provincially-owned B.C. Ferry Corp., Vancouver Island Coach Lines and Pacific Stage Lines as well as CP Rail, the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway, B.C. Coast Service and Canadian National Railways.

CP Rail and CNR passes are valid on all lines for ministers but members are limited to free transportation within the province, a spokesman said.

Mexico Quake

MEXICO CITY (UPI) — A sharp earthquake rocked Mexico City today, collapsing buildings and killing an undetermined number of people, fire officials said.

The quake rocked buildings throughout the centre of the city and fire officials said "several" buildings had collapsed. Windows shattered along the main avenues, sending workers streaming into the streets in panic.

Unemployment Benefit Pinch Faces Quitters

Times News Services

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is considering toughening unemployment insurance rules affecting persons who collect benefits after quitting jobs voluntarily. Employment Minister Bud Cullen said Tuesday.

Cullen also said Canada Works job-creation grants will be cut from constituencies where the unemployment rate is less than eight per cent.

Denying unemployment benefits to quitters has been rejected in the past because "we would put the employees at the mercy of the employers."

The senior officials were responding at a Commons manpower committee meeting to Paul McCrossan (PC—York Scarborough) who said benefits should be denied to persons who quit before two or three years on a job.

He said this would be a better way to cut unemployment insurance costs than measures currently proposed by the government. The measures are being studied by MPs in the manpower committee.

Government figures say last year about 220,000 individuals voluntarily quit their jobs without "just cause" such as illness and received about $450 million in unemployment insurance benefits. That's an average $2,100 each.

"That's a much more fruitful area to go after," McCrossan said.

"This is an area we have considered and I can't say we have totally ruled it out," Cullen said. He said an advisory committee in his department is studying ways to get at quitters.

Under current rules, persons who quit without just cause lose six weeks of insurance benefits as a penalty.

Explaining the remark about sexual exploitation in an interview later, Manion cited cases of a series of women quitting the same job for the same employer.

He said the women refused to say why they quit. But when the manpower centre investigates, "eventually some of the people break down and tell us about real or imagined sexual approaches by the employer."

On the Canada Works grant cutback, Cullen told MPs in the Commons manpower committee: "We're tilting Canada Works into areas of high unemployment."

Under the current Canada Works formula, every constituency is granted a minimum $150,000 a year for job creation, regardless of the unemployment rate in the region.

Extra Canada Works funds are spent in constituencies where the unemployment rate is at least seven per cent. Ridings with high Indian and Metis populations get special additional grants.

Trio Arrested For Abduction

Two young men and a 16-year-old juvenile are in custody in connection with an assault and abduction in Saanich on Monday.

Police said the three have been charged with unlawful confinement, assault causing bodily harm and breaking and entering.

They were to appear in court later today.

The charges arise out of an incident involving 17-year-old Clinton Dobie who was beaten up and dragged from his home at 1563 San Juan early Monday afternoon.

The suspects were picked up by city police Tuesday night in a 2500-block Douglas Street apartment. A police spokesman said the door to the apartment had to be forced open after the suspects slammed it when officers approached.

Dobie was driven off by his assailants but managed to get free and return home early that evening.

Police said the youth received cuts and bruises but was otherwise not seriously injured in the attack.

COSTLY FOOD 'JUST IN MIND'

HAMILTON (CP) — A Toronto professor says high food prices exist only in the minds of consumers.

John Sokol, a York University professor who lectures on food and also owns a cattle farm, said consumers are not as aware of the price they pay for items they can purchase with a credit card as they are about food costs because they have to pay in cash for groceries.

"He (the consumer) can buy tires for his car with a credit card and somehow it doesn't seem so bad when he pays it back a month later," Sokol said Monday at a meeting of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture.

"But he has to go to the bank to get cash to pay for food and, when he takes out $50 for food and has to go back for more money the next day, he complains."

Consumers should not complain about food prices because they could cut their bills considerably by eating less meat and avoiding fresh, imported vegetables and organic foods, Sokol said.

"Eating more potatoes and carrots would be better for people," he said. "I believe we eat too much meat."

Sokol said later in an interview that Canadians will be paying about 15 per cent more for their food, plus increases caused by inflation, within the next five years.

"Canada's farmers have to get better returns on their labor and investments or they're going to quit farming," he said.

"One of the real dangers is that if we don't start paying more for food soon, large corporations will take over farming in this country as individual farmers give up."

Community Grant Plan Unveiled by Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet Tuesday unveiled a long-awaited and much-discussed $400-million grant program to provide community services across the country over the next two years.

Ouellet said $150 million will be awarded to the provinces January 1, 1979, with another $250 million the following year, pending written agreement with provincial governments.

Estimates for 1979 provide $15.2 million for British Columbia, $4.2 million for Newfoundland, $0.9 million for Prince Edward Island, $5.5 million for Nova Scotia $4.2 million for New Brunswick, $47 million for Quebec, $51 million for Ontario, $6.5 million for Manitoba, $4.6 million for Saskatchewan and $10.6 million for Alberta.

The funds will go to municipalities for such projects as sewage treatment facilities, water supply systems, day care centres, recreation buildings and neighborhood improvement plans.

The minister said the program will be introduced in the House of Commons next week. He made the announcement following a meeting of Commons committee on housing.

He said the program will provide increased flexibility and wider latitude to the provinces and their municipalities in using federal funds.

UNITED WAY AT 93%

The United Way of Greater Victoria had raised $860,000 or 93 per cent of its $926,500 goal by noon Tuesday and hopes to reach its objective by Friday, executive director Stuart Drummond said today.

Bread Price Increase At Least 7¢: Bakers

OTTAWA (CP) — The cost of a loaf of bread will increase at least seven cents in January as the result of the withdrawal of a federal consumer subsidy, bakers and consumers association spokesmen said today.

They disputed a five-cent-a-loaf increase that Wheat Board Minister Otto Lang said will occur as a result of the ending of a subsidy paid to farmers in exchange for a fixed domestic wheat price.

And they said the price increase could be as much as 10 cents a loaf by next summer.

Charles Tisdall, managing director of the Bakery Council of Canada, said the price was expected to jump three cents to five cents a loaf anyway in 1979 because of higher wage and energy costs.

Tisdall said in a telephone interview from Toronto the subsidy removal will just add to the costs bakers must pass on to the grocery shopper.

Barb Sulzenko of the Consumers Association of Canada said the federal government "should realize food prices are a serious problem and try regarding increases rather than encouraging them."

Earlier, in the Commons, Warren Allmand, consumer and corporate affairs minister, said food companies may be summoned before the federal government to explain why their profits have been soaring.

Allmand made the statement amid opposition accusations that he has stood by idly like "a toothless tiger" while food companies ripped off consumers.

The MPs based their charge on a report released Monday showing that profits per unit of output in the food and beverage industry rose by 63 per cent between the first and third quarters of this year.

SIAMESE TWINS BORN

A Royal Jubilee Hospital spokesman said today girl Siamese twins were born at the hospital shortly before midnight Tuesday.

The girls are reported in stable condition.

Hospital officials refused to give details on how the infants are joined or to say whether any assessment has yet been made on separating the babies.

It is understood however, that the children are joined in the abdominal region.

The children were born to a Greater Victoria area woman, but her identity and that of of her family doctor are being withheld.

The birth was the first of Siamese twins in the hospital's history.

PEKING — With shouts of "Long live democracy" and "We will never turn back," more than 6,000 people marched from the Hsi Tan poster wall to Tien An Men square Tuesday night — twice the size of the crowd that made the pilgrimage the night before. (See earlier story on page 32).

If there was any doubt about the spontaneity of the proceedings during the past few days, it was removed this time when it became readily apparent that the movement for greater democracy in China is without any leaders and at the moment has no goal other than to shout brave slogans to a willing crowd.

The most anyone got to an explicit instruction was a statement from a young electrical worker who stood up in front of the martyrs' monument in the centre of Tien An Men — battery megaphone in hand — and said:

"There has never been a better chance to say what we think than now. Don't let it pass. Take the spirit of this meeting and the spirit of Hsi Tan democracy wall to your units so that it will grow."

For the most part, the rest of the gathering was taken up with excited readings of the lead article of Tuesday's People's Daily, which quoted Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping's enthusiastic support of wall posters and lively debates. The statement came in an account of his meeting with members of the visiting delegation of the Japanese Socialist party.

One of the most amusing spectacles was the sight of Western correspondents passing out their business cards — English on one side, Chinese on the other — to anyone who showed a spark of independence. A lot of cards went out. Since these cards include what is surely the first phone numbers of Westerners these Chinese have ever had, the phone lines should be busy the next few days.

I know because I got a jump on everyone five days earlier by placing a big-character poster up to find a lost ring. It included my phone number and life at the Globe and Mail bureau has not been quite the same since. It is not that there has been such a deluge of calls, but for the

Ford Says Penalties To Cost It $230M

LONDON (Reuter) — The Ford Motor Co. says penalties imposed by the British government for breaching its pay limit may cost the company as much as $230 million during the next year.

The government said Tuesday said it has decided to impose sanctions against Ford for giving its 57,000 workers wage increases that were more than three times above the official five-percent guideline.

The measures, the first taken against a U.S.-owned company, involve withholding of orders for Ford vehicles and probably bans on export credits, employment subsidies and investment aid.

Ford, which sells 25,000 cars, trucks and vans to the government annually, said Tuesday night the the loss of these orders will cost it about $230 million.

Sir Terence Beckett, chairman of Ford's British unit, said the sanctions would be far more damaging than the government appears to appreciate.

Ford's workers have just returned to their jobs after an eight-week strike in which the company said it lost about $1 billion worth of production.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey, who came under heavy attack in parliament after he announced the measures, said: "If we had let Ford get away with this grossly excessive settlement, people who have helped keep inflation down would have felt grieved."

Opposition Conservatives immediately sprang to Ford's defence. Their economic affairs spokesman, Sir Geoffrey Howe, said imposing sanctions against Ford, one of Britain's prime export-earners, was like fining a householder who has been burgled.

The government, however, sought to limit the damage to Ford by not asking local governments to follow its lead.

The huge state-owned industries, which buy at least $92 million worth of Ford vehicles have only been "invited" — not ordered — to boycott the company.

Would Sex Therapy Trim Jobless Ranks?

OTTAWA (CP) — Do you have to have a job in order to make love?

The draft version of Hansard, official record of Commons proceedings, had Progressive Conservative Eldon Woolliams (Calgary North) making that unusual assertion Tuesday.

During a question by NDP leader Ed Broadbent, Woolliams interjected: "I always thought if you made profits you would have jobs."

His statement appeared several hours later in the Hansard draft as "I always thought if you make love, you should have jobs."

U.S. TRADE DEFICIT UP $2.3B

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States trade deficit, one of the nation's most troublesome international problems, grew by $2.13 billion in October as imports surged to a new record, the government announced today.

Americans's sold $13.01 billion worth of products to their trading partners last month while buying a record $15.14 billion. The resulting $2.13-billion deficit was the largest since July and considerably above the average $1.65-billion deficit of the past two months.

Oil imports, a principal cause of the large string of monthly deficits, totalled $3.49 billion last month, a drop from September, but still high by historical standards.

October was the 29th consecutive month that the U.S. trade ledger has been in the red.

The size of the merchandise trade deficit — $24.79 billion during the first 10 months of this year and $26.5 billion during 1977 — has caused the United States some serious problems.

It was a main reason for the steep decline in the value of the American dollar abroad. President Carter was forced Nov. 1 to launch an emergency, $30-billion plan to rescue the U.S. dollar.

Ottawa Backs Broadcasters In Border-TV Controversy

WASHINGTON (CP) — Ottawa has put its weight behind private broadcasters from Canada appearing today before a U.S. committee on trade negotiations to defend Canadian tax curbs on border television advertising.

Ottawa has asked the U.S. state department to present a note to the committee saying the 1976 tax changes do not violate U.S. laws and are needed to protect the Canadian broadcasting industry.

No Canadian government official will testify at the committee hearing because it is not considered appropriate for Canada to defend its policies before a foreign tribunal, Canadian embassy officials said Tuesday.

At issue in the public hearing is a 1976 Canadian tax law that says Canadian companies may not make tax deductions for television advertising that is directed primarily at an audience in Canada through a U.S. station.

A complaint that the Canadian law is discriminatory, unreasonable and unjustifiable was filed by 15 U.S. television stations.

The Canadian side in the dispute will be presented in a joint submission from CITY-TV of Toronto, Moffatt Communications Ltd. of Winnipeg and CHAN-TV of Vancouver, as well as in a separate response from Rogers Cable Communications Ltd. of Toronto.

The U.S. companies' petition was made under provisions of the U.S. Trade Act and asks for increased duties against Canadian-made goods or other import restrictions to force Ottawa to change the law.

The note the Canadian government sent to the state department says Canadian broadcasters were losing $20 million annually by 1974 because advertising revenues were flowing to U.S. border television stations. Canadian industry could not afford the loss so Ottawa acted to stop it.

It also says U.S. broadcasters still receive substantial economic benefits because Canadian networks and individual stations buy U.S.-made programs. In 1977, Canadian broadcasters paid about $50 million for U.S. programs, up from $45 million a year earlier.

Canada also rejects the U.S. broadcasters' position that the tax changes violate international trade arrangements under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Anti-Sleeper Strike Grows

TOKYO (Reuter) — International and domestic flights operated by Japan Air Lines (JAL) were severely crippled today when crew unions resumed strikes calling for the abolition of a sleeper service.

More than 10,000 passengers would be affected today by the cancellation of 112 of 142 scheduled services, JAL said.

Cockpit crew members walked out Tuesday, causing many cancellations, following complaints from stewardesses that they sometimes had to face naked men and intimate couples using the airline's new sleeper service.

Overnight temperatures again were mild in most of B.C. as a result of mild air and cloudy skies maintained by weak disturbances moving aloft. A more vigorous disturbance is nearing the north coast and ahead of it rain and wind is spreading to the Charlottes. As this depression moves southward down the coast, the occasional light rain and drizzle will give way to steadier rain overnight. As the effect of this depression spreads to the interior, most areas can expect some snow on Thursday. Following this a gradual clearing trend will commence late Thursday as a ridge of high pressure builds in from the northwest.

London Times To Stop Publishing

TORONTO (CP) — Lord Thomson of Fleet said today he deeply regrets that publication of The Times of London and The Sunday Times and various supplements will be suspended Thursday, but he does not intend that the closure will be permanent.

"In view of my strong personal commitment I hope that the suspension will be for the minimum time," Thomson said in a statement. He plans to fly to London next week to restate his position before the British public.

The decision to suspend publication of Britain's two top papers, involving about 4,000 employees, followed months of fruitless negotiations between management and unions on company demands for a halt to wildcat strikes and assured productivity.

"The events leading up to this decision are tragic," said Thomson who is the son of the late Canadian-born Roy Thomson who purchased both papers in the development of newspaper groups in Canada, Britain and the United States.

"Surely, almost everyone on the staff is sick of what has been happening. It has been a nightmare. Suspension of publication is a drastic step. One cannot, however, allow the papers to be slowly bled to death."

Give Us Some Cyanide, Viet Prisoners Plead

TORONTO (CP) — Pleading for cyanide to end their days of agony in jail, 49 Vietnamese prisoners have written a manifesto of the horror in which they live.

They have delivered the manifesto through a man who was left chained in a cell for 28 months at the hands of the North Vietnamese Communists.

The document, signed by Buddist and Catholic priests, professionals and intellectuals, tells of a huge concentration camp for 800,000 prisoners in the former South Vietnam while the rest of the population is kept in line by the rationing of food and medical care.

It is a bleak picture of the country from which U.S. troops withdrew just over three years ago and it was related to a Toronto news conference by a former pro-Communist student agitator.

Doan Van Toai, 32, said he met the same fate as all former South Vietnamese who had worked in the underground to aid the Communist take-over — prison.

Describing the near-starvation of the people and the agony of the jails, the document Doan brought with him pleaded:

"If it is true that humanity today retreats in fear before the growth of Communism and above all the so-called invincibility of Vietnamese Communists who have defeated the all-powerful American imperialism, then we, prisoners in Vietnam, request the International Red Cross, world humanitarian organizations, men of goodwill, to send each of us a dose of cyanide so that we may end our suffering and our humiliation.

"We want to die at once. Help us to do this. Help us to die at once. We shall be eternally grateful to you."

Doan said his ailing mother died after being refused admission to hospital because he had stopped cooperating with the Communists.

"The Communist government in Vietnam is using a food-rationing policy to control the near-starving population," he said at the news conference.

"Those who blindly obey them will get their rice ration but those who oppose them will be cut off."

The 3½-by-nine-metre cell he shared with 39 others had only a 10-by-15-centimetre hole for air.

REFUGEE BATCH NO. 2 ARRIVES

MONTREAL (CP) — A second batch of about 160 Vietnamese refugees — part of a group of 604 immigrating to Canada after being stranded on a freighter off the Malaysian coast — arrived here Tuesday night.

They arrived aboard a Canadian Armed Forces Boeing 707 and disembarked at Dorval International Airport, an immigration department spokesman said.

They were quickly processed and, like the first batch of 159 which arrived Saturday, were taken to the east-end Longue Pointe military base where they will be clothed and fed.

A snowstorm earlier Tuesday has delayed the departure of most members of the first plane load for their new homes in Montreal and other Canadian cities.

The refugees were among 2,500 who have been living aboard the dilapidated freighter Hai Hong off the Malaysian coast waiting for countries to accept them.

Malaysia refused to let them land, saying it has already taken in 40,000 refugees who fled Vietnam to escape persecution by that country's Communist regime.

Their plight has sparked calls for international assistance from the United Nations.

The other refugees accepted by Canada are scheduled to arrive within a week.

Boat People Outfox Patrols

KUALA LUMPUR (UPI) — Hundreds more Vietnamese refugees slipped past naval and police patrols and smashed their boats on Malaysia's eastern beaches so they wouldn't be sent back to sea, police said today.

The flood of new arrivals swelled the population of the country's refugee camps to more than 42,500 and Home Affairs Minister Ghazali Shafie appealed to the United States to open its shores to the "boat people."

In Washington, Attorney General Griffin Bell asked Congress to raise the quota of Indochinese refugees by 22,000 to ease the crisis.

Police said at least 5,000 men, women and children from a flotilla of more than 30 boats have managed to slip past patrol boats and reach land in recent week, hundreds of them Tuesday. They destroyed their boats to avoid being pushed back out to sea.

Authorities said pockets of stranded refugees were waiting in the states of Kelantan, Trengganu, Pahang and Johore to be taken to the camps.

Shafie said Tuesday night the influx of Vietnamese was "well beyond the level of tolerance" for Malaysia and hinted that unless the United States stepped in the government would have to crack down harder.

"If the United States is sincerely prepared to receive these people, then no limit and criteria to their entry into the state should be placed," he said.

In a Tuesday night debate, a member of the ruling National Front Party suggested the government declare the entire 700-mile long east coast a restricted area under emergency law.

"This means illegal immigrants could be shot," she said.

Vance Shuttle?

Times News Services

U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance may make a rapid shuttle mission to the Middle East to try to revive the Egyptian-Israeli peace talks and produce a treaty between the two nations before Christmas.

Meanwhile, at the United Nations, the General Assembly's Special Political Committee approved three resolutions Tuesday condemning practices and policies in the Israeli-occupied Arab territories.

The first called on Israel to acknowledge and comply with provisions of the 1949 Geneva Convention on the protection of civilians in time of war.

The second called on Israel "to desist forthwith from taking any legal action which would result in changing the legal status, geographical nature or demographic composition of the Arab territories occupied since 1967, including Jerusalem."

The third condemned a series of Israeli practices such as the annexation of parts of the occupied territories.

Tax Subsidies

The complaints about the University of Victoria not paying its fair share of property taxes to the municipality of Saanich (and Oak Bay, for their mutual boundary bisects the campus) do have some validity, but the complainants are stretching a point.

As Ald. John Mika claims, it's true that UVic and Camosun College are tax exempt, and that if they were not an extra $1 million a year would flow into Saanich's treasury.

But the free riders include more than just UVic and Camosun. Every elementary and secondary school and church in B.C. (including private and religious schools) is exempted from having to pay property taxes. The reasoning behind the exemption is that these institutions are different from commercial and residential property owners.

Their property is held in common by groups of people who have come together, or who represent us in absentia like the school board, for some more ennobling purpose than making a buck. That taxing philosophy can be argued with, but surely it is inconsistent to harangue UVic and Camosun College for shirking their civic duties, and ignore the much greater potential tax harvest in the dozens of schools cluttering up Saanich's valuable real estate.

If Camosun College should be taxed according to the Mika philosophy, why not the rest of the Greater Victoria school board's holdings as well? If the board was forced to pay full property taxes, Saanich could retire all its tedious arguments about industrial parks and live happily ever after.

That's spreading the argument a bit thinly in the other direction, but it is no more outrageous than the suggestion to force universities and colleges to pay full taxes.

The McMath commission which examined property taxation in B.C. in some detail a few years ago recommended that all classes of property start off as taxable, and that municipal councils make a decision in public with all the taxpayers aware on whether or not churches or schools or universities will get an exemption.

Now the exemptions are embedded in law, half-hidden and the taxpaying public is largely unaware that it is in fact subsidizing the activities of religious organizations, schools and so on. Should they be?

Some Facts on Crows

Pity the poor, maligned crow. Few people appreciate this ugly black bird. Saanich council wants to kill great numbers of them, because they are allegedly decimating the songbird population and waking people up in the morning with their raucous cries.

Saanich is going to ask its neighboring municipalities to co-operate in killing off the birds at their nesting grounds around Victoria. This obsession with avian extermination has gone far enough. If sentiments of live and let live won't move council, perhaps some straight facts on the so-called crow problem will change a few minds.

Crows do eat birds' eggs and young nestlings — they are predators, much like man. But crows and robins have coexisted for many, many years. Robins lay more eggs than the two per pair necessary to maintain their population; in fact if the first batch of eggs is destroyed, often a robin will lay others.

Without the natural controls on their numbers by the crows, there would soon be an excessive number of robins and other songbirds. Soon there would be complaints about this new pest problem and demands for more extermination.

People talk a lot about a supposed increase in the crow population, but the facts are that their numbers have remained fairly constant over the years. The annual Christmas bird count held by local birdwatchers — the best and most reliable statistics on the size of bird populations we have — last year noted about 3,900 crows. In 1976, some 2,700 and the year before that 6,859. The population has fluctuated between 7,000 and 2,500 during the 1970s, but there is no evidence to suggest that their numbers are wildly out of control.

Tampering with the natural balance between various species of birds and animals and insects is risky business even with the best information; proceeding out of blind ignorance is asking for trouble.

What Will Convince?

A Canada-wide opinion poll made public last week showed that 88 per cent of Canadians believe stricter controls are necessary on unemployment insurance.

A full one-third of those surveyed went so far as to say they believe that "lack of a work ethic" is the main cause of unemployment in Canada today.

This week the Post Office here in Victoria announced it had received more than 2,000 applications for the fewer than 300 seasonal jobs it had available. In Vancouver, the situation was even worse.

Will no evidence convince the majority of Canadian people to abandon their safe belief that unemployment is the fault of the unemployed and understand the reality that unemployment is the result of a situation in which there are many fewer jobs than there are people needing and wanting work?

BRUCE HUTCHISON

Looking for a Soft Landing

WASHINGTON — On Oct. 24, President Carter told the American people that "we must face a time of national austerity. Hard choices are necessary if we want to avoid consequences that are even worse."

There was more truth in this warning than the president realized. His first attempt to rescue the U.S. dollar by voluntary wage guidelines having failed within a week, he announced the first instalment of austerity by raising interest rates and tightening credit to curb inflation and perhaps ensure a recession.

What did he mean by austerity, a condition that most Americans had not experienced since the dreadful 1930s? Obviously he did not know and does not know yet in more than vague rhetorical terms.

Canada Affected

But he knows, and all his experts agree, that the world's largest and richest economy is beginning to slow down. So it must, or suffer an inflationary explosion and then an inevitable slump like that of 1974-1975. In the official jargon the supreme task of government during the next year, or several years, is to execute a "soft landing," to contain the pressures of wages, profits and prices without grave damage to the whole business machine.

A landing of some kind, soft or hard, is certainly ahead and Canadians would be foolish to suppose that they are not passengers in the integrated North American vehicle. When no one can foresee the precise prospects of 1979, or the real meaning of austerity, Canada's government and opposition are debating very dubious assumptions as if they were reliable. Of course they are not.

However the Ottawa politicians argue them in biased pre-election rhetoric, some of the known figures are more disturbing in Canada than in the United States. For example:

This year the United States will run a net deficit on foreign trade of about $20 billion which — apart from the raids of speculators — is the cause of the dollar's weakness.

Canada's net deficit was about $4 billion last year and the government hoped to reduce it to about $3 billion this year. Instead, it is now reckoned at about $5 billion with foreign travel accounting for some $2 billion of the total — an ironic commentary on a nation that considers itself too poor to enjoy the luxuries of life. Since the American economy is roughly 10 times the size of the Canadian, our deficit is proportionately more than twice as large as our neighbor's.

Again, the United States government will run a budgetary deficit of about $40 billion in the fiscal year ending next autumn as against Canada's deficit of about $12 billion in the fiscal year ending next spring. Proportionately, the Canadian deficit is about three times as large as the American and yet the parliamentary opposition proposes to increase it by huge tax reductions.

On the other hand, real economic growth in both nations in the present calendar year will be roughly equal at something less than four per cent. Wage settlements in the United States, averaging 8.5 per cent, have been higher than in Canada and both nations should end the year with a consumer price increase of seven to eight per cent.

For the next calendar year the Canadian government predicts economic growth of 4.0 to 5.4 per cent, not enough to reduce total unemployment in the world's fastest-growing labor force. Before the president proclaimed austerity his experts predicted growth of 3.5 per cent in 1979. Now they will be well satisfied with three per cent, and may not get that much. If they don't, a lesser rate is sure to affect Canada's prospects.

Boom Is Over

These are dull figures, disgorged by the computers, mouthed by the politicians and distrusted by the quarrelling economists. But, accurate or not in detail, their meaning is quite clear: North America will not see in the next few years anything like the growth rate of about five per cent achieved in the lush 1960s. The big boom is finished. The continental living standard (so-called) is at, or past, its peak, for the time being anyhow.

Hence the overriding and baffling problem of politics in Washington and Ottawa alike: How can the American and Canadian people be persuaded to accept a mild dose of austerity when the alternative is the old, brutal cure of a serious recession or, as the president says, something even worse?

So far neither people has been persuaded, though both are terrified of inflation. And as time runs out, Carter and Trudeau must decide to pursue their first stumbling steps toward reasonable austerity — at grave political risk — or let North America plunge into a hard landing.

Careers Built by Spending

OTTAWA — For a dozen years now careers have not been built in Ottawa by good public administration of limited resources but by designing new programs and being closely associated with the heavy spending they involved.

The size of the public service has increased enormously and since 1962-63, a little earlier than the period in which the nature of career-building changed so radically, budgetary spending by the federal government rose by 487 per cent from $7.3 billion to $42.9 billion. This is not the whole of public spending, because there are non-budgetary items and in addition the expenditures of the provinces and municipalities.

During this period the quality of financial administration declined so gravely that the auditor-general, J.J. Macdonell, was forced in an earlier report to warn that the government had lost control of spending. He now sees some progress towards re-establishing a healthier state of affairs but he remains "concerned and troubled."

Not everyone will agree, but it seems to me that the annual horror stories that come out in the auditor-general's report are not the most important part of its contents. It is essential to the nation's financial health that these examples of unsatisfactory spending should be reported to Parliament but there is even greater importance to finding out why they occur and what is being done to correct them.

Emphasized Spending

Mr. Macdonell is sure that he has found some of the causes and remedies to them and a key passage in his current report says that over the years since the Glassco commission on government organization "a generation of managers came into positions of responsibility during a period of general economic buoyancy where emphasis was largely on conceiving and developing new programs, on broadening existing ones, particularly in the field of social welfare, andon the delivery of programs.

"It was probably inevitable that a set of values would develop among managers in which these aspects of their responsibilities took on paramount importance while close attention to the economical and efficient management of human and financial resources was significantly less important to them. ...

"A sense of personal accountability for the economical, efficient and effective management of public funds and resources does not seem to have been a key characteristic of managerial responsibility in the public service of Canada. On the contrary during the period of rapid expansion in the federal government, it appears that the public purse was gradually deemed virtually bottomless and that access to it was not unduly restricted for the ingenious. ...

"Their mandate was unclear and their training inadequate."

The auditor-general believes that he has carried his new approaches far enough that the clock cannot be turned back on him at some future point and that the new concepts of public accounting which he is introducing will be effective in establishing control of spending.

Without the least down-grading the importance and value of Mr. Macdonell's work, that in itself will never be enough to bring about the improvement that is so vitally necessary. That will require a new philosophy among the most senior public servants and that will not develop unless it is firmly demanded of them by their political masters.

J. J. MACDONELL
... uncovers horror stories

And these masters, the men and women in cabinet, must develop the philosophy among themselves before they can hope to encourage its development at the official level just below them.

The present government has often seemed not to care about efficient management. Otherwise, it would never appoint men to high positions who have had no training or experience that suits them for the post. If we hope to see better management of money and men in the government's operations, then it is essential that high officials should be qualified for the jobs they hold.

Training as a diplomat or success as a lawyer does not equip a man for appointment as head of a business corporation whether it is publicly or privately owned. Nor does lifelong loyalty to the Liberal party in itself qualify a man for high appointments, although there is no reason why it should disqualify him if he has otherwise the characteristics and background that his new job will demand.

This is no more than another way of saying that in career-building within the public service, there must be at least as great a premium attached to sound administration as there is to devising new ways of spending the public funds. That is not the way things are now.

"The present system of personnel management seems to offer few rewards and incentives — tangible or intangible — for economies in using human resources," the auditor general writes. "In fact, the system appears to provide actual disincentives for managers to promote the economical and efficient use of resources — human and financial."

Act of Courage

Another telling passage from the report:

"Any attempt to evaluate effectiveness in the government environment is an act of courage."

Much will depend upon the attitude and philosophy of the next government of Canada, Liberal or Conservative. It would be strange if a period of budgetary restrictions, such as the present, did not produce over time an improvement in the use of resources. Already there must be considerably fewer managers in the service of the government who view the public purse as a bottomless pit for the ingenious.

If the next government maintains a tight grip on spending, that in itself will tend to destroy the situation where it requires courage to attempt evaluation of a government program. To have been the cause of one of the horror stories in future reports of auditors-general may become a career disadvantage, slowing promotion.

If, however, the next government views the current constraints on spending as no more than a temporary unpleasantness, we will not see much improvement in public administration no matter how hard the auditors work.

Board Balkanizers

The sympathy that Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Regional Board and Howard Drummond, Colwood director of the CRB show for over-ruling the wishes of the electorate on the matter of incorporation as reported in the Times of Nov. 20 (West Communities Ball in B.C. Court) is appalling. These gentlemen, who owe their positions to popular vote, show an unconscionable disregard for the wishes of the people and the very basis of democratic government. It is quite clear that they, if they had their way, would completely balkanize the entire lower Island by creating yet three more municipalities. Thank God the people can collectively speak, in our system of government, to curb the arrogance of some individuals.

The is no doubt in my mind that most people who voted against incorporation would have supported it if it had been on a broader and more rational basis and if they could have been assured that they would have been spared the ignominy of being placed under elected officials who chose to disregard their wishes. Mr. Campbell's and Mr. Drummond's statements concerning the allegedly favored position of Western Community taxpayers will continue to lack credibility until they come up with more specific information.

We are paying our way as fairly as the taxpayers of Sooke and Mill Bay and are not asking for better and more expensive services. On the other hand Ed Lubick's statement renews one's faith in democracy and moves one to the position of believing the langford is well served by its elective representative. — William F. Ramsay, 3543 Charnley Place.

No Snoopers for Me

A flyer, recently delivered to my home and issued by the Pacific Mazda Peugeot car dealers offers, among other services, a "radar snooper" at a cost of $99.95 installed.

It seems to me that there is a serious flaw in a society which apparently permits the profit motive to directly or indirectly publicly advocate the breaking of its laws. In any case, this particular dealer can be assured that the writer will not be availing himself of their radar snooper service or any other kind of car service. — A. J. Broome, 2275 Dunlevy Street.

Awful Pollution

Your paper is so filled with disaster, government "squanditures" and immorality in high places that it is now time you found something more amusing to print.

However, before I leave such sordid subjects, I feel that I must complain about some awful oil pollution that I encountered the other day:

I happened to open a new tin of sardines, and, — would you believe it? — the tin was full of oil and fish were all dead! — Roger Napier, 80 King George Terrace.

Sober Up First

I would like to express my disagreement with the position taken by the Vancouver Express (Council Made Humane Decision) reprinted in your edition of Nov. 25. The article suggests that the B.C. Judicial Council's recommendation to allow Judge Erik Bendrodt to continue on the bench in the light of his drunken behavior is consistent with notions of humanitarianism. I would like to suggest otherwise.

Most people would presumably agree that had the judicial council recommended that Bendrodt be disbarred and summarily dismissed from the bench, they would be acting inhumanely. Thus, to take the opposite position and do nothing, is humane. In my opinion this is not an act of humanity but an act of avoidance and weakness.

Society has the right to know that a magistrate, having been given the task of determining an accused's guilt or innocence and whether or not to send a guilty person to prison, is carrying out that awesome responsibility using the very best possible judgment. This cannot be done if the magistrate is fortifying himself on a daily bottle of whiskey. If Judge Bendrodt wishes to continue on the bench and expresses the desire to sober up, he should be given the opportunity of taking say, three months' leave of absence with pay, so that he can commence a treatment program. Upon successful completion of the treatment he could be returned to the bench.

It is this kind of course of action that is humanitarian. Charity, benevolence and kindness all have their place but do not override a fundamental principle which decrees that participants in society contribute to the well-being of that society before earning the right to enjoy its benefit. Judge Bendrodt's behavior violates this principle and he should not be allowed to sit on the bench until he can maintain sobriety. — Colin S. Sheppard, 630 Phelps Avenue.

Mad Rat Race

I was completely puzzled when I read that J. J. Macdonnell, the auditor-general, suggests that wasteful public servants be replaced with the best of private business managers, earning from $100,000 to $200,000 instead of $40,000 to $50,000. I seriously question his sanity.

In my opinion, these people are the frontrunners of a mad rat race which only leads to more inflation on one side, and cynicism on the other.

I am in full agreement with Macdonnell that wasteful public service mandarins be replaced; but by true patriots, who are willing to do the job for half their present wages. They will be true servants indeed, their main qualifications, beside their professional knowledge, being honesty, integrity and a true sense of responsibility. — W. Schuldes, Victoria.

Militant Moslems Seek to Impose Old Values

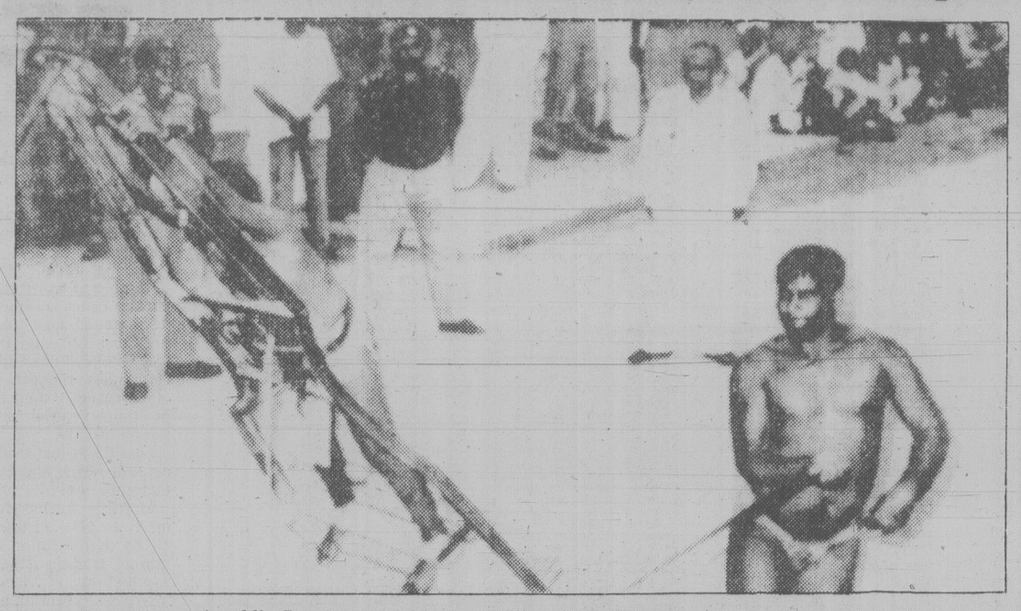

By MARTIN WOOLLACOTT
Manchester Guardian

Throughout the Moslem world a new kind of militant Islam is on the march. In Iran it has forced the Shah, the very epitome of the strong monarch, into a retreat which may not yet have ended. In Pakistan, it has played its part in sweeping Zulfikar Bhutto from the premiership to the death cell. It is a threat to established national leaders, like Anwar Sadat in Egypt and Bulent Ecevit in Turkey, and it is a force which ordinary Moslems and Westerners alike are only just beginning to recognize as a distinct and powerful phenomenon.

'All the rules'

"Iran's problems can only be solved through an Islamic republic," says the exiled Ayatollah Khomeini. Pakistan's problems can only be solved, according to one Islamic leader, "when we accept that God has given us all the rules of the game . . . and a thing punishable by God must be punishable by the State."

General Zia-ul-Haq, the Pakistani Chief of State, declared last week from Mecca: "In Islam lies our salvation — both worldly and spiritual." "The Egyptian government," says the resurgent Moslem Brotherhood, "is damned because it denies 'the sovereignty of God'."

A public flogging staged by new military-Moslem regime in Pakistan

The roots of this family of fundamentalist movements go back to the turn of the century, as the age of some of the leaders — Ayatollah Khomeini is 78 and Malauna Mawdudi of Pakistan is 75 — indicates. But they have little to do with the traditional response to Christian intrusion, and still less with the Islamic reinterpretation of Western values that began with Al-Afghani.

Nor are they identified with modern Moslem nationalism, which most of the fundamentalists have systematically rejected. Indeed, it is the legacy of Attaturk, Nasser, Jinnah, Reza Shah, Sukarno, and the other modernizing Moslem leaders which they repudiate with the greatest loathing, although they may sometimes compromise on the men themselves because of the enduring reputation of these national heroes.

The factors which have given this ideological Islam fresh life in recent years are complicated, but two stand out. One is the perception that the West, once so powerful and unassailable, is beset by problems and crises, and the other arises from the failures of secular nationalism in the Moslem world itself.

West Decadence

Maulana Mawdudi, the founder of the Jama'at-i-Islami, the leading Islamic ideology party in Pakistan, teaches that capitalism, fascism and communism are all products of the decadence of Western civilization. AlBanna, the founder of the Moslem Brotherhood, preached the same sermon. The Iranian intellectual Seyyed Hossein, one of the most sophisticated and attractive exponents, argues that, "It is the very humanist conception of man that has dragged him to the infra-human."

Modern civilization, according to these arguments, is a monstrous aberration of the once healthy Christian culture which has all but destroyed the West, Russia, and China, and is eroding the foundations of Islam and Hinduism as well. The carriers of this Western disease to the Orient include the modernizing Moslems.

Attaturk, who called Islam "the rules and theories of an immoral Arab Sheikh," was the worst example. Reza Shah, the present Shah's father, whose policies were similar to those of the Turkish dictator, is not far behind. Jinnah, a secular nationalist with the thinnest of Islamic veneers, yet another.

Thus Mawdudi, for instance, opposed both Jawaharlal Nehru and Jinnah as equally guilty of putting man above God and territorial nationalism above the community of faith. The Moslem Brotherhood, even today, are far less concerned about Palestine — a conflict between Arab and Israeli nationalisms — than about the "Godlessness" of both sides.

The heart of ideological Islam is its conception of the religion as a "total system," derived from the Koran and the traditions of the Prophet, and supposedly laying down clear guides for every aspect of personal, social, and political life. After much else has been tried and found wanting, this comprehensive answer has its attractions for the frustrated and worried in troubled societies.

Authoritarian

Apart from a literal adherence to the tariff of duties and penalties in the Koran — the amputation of hands and whipping, which so strikes the Westerner — this concept extends the religious principle of total obedience to God to political life. "Islam totally repudiates the philosophy of popular sovereignty," Mawdudi argued, and the State's sphere is "co-extensive with the whole of human life." The potential authoritarianism is obvious.

A further vital element is the idea that an Islamic economic system, based on private property but transcending class, rejecting capitalist institutions like interest but nevertheless operating productively, is both desirable and practicable.

The point of entry of the fundamentalists into modern politics has usually been the same: the Shariat, the Moslem legal code. Because of the central religious significance of the Shariat in Islam, it has been hard even for modernizing Moslems to oppose such demands. Leaders like the Shah, President Sadat and Bhutto have tried to accommodate them in theory without giving anything away in practice, but inevitably the argument about Islamic control of the Constitution and supervision of legislation has been the key practical battleground.

It remains, for instance, the single concrete demand of the Iranian religious leaders, which is why the Board of Mullahs, agreed in the 1906 Constitution and never set up, has been again and again a contentious issue. Above all, the fundamentalists have wanted real control over that Godless document, the modern Constitution, with its sinful borrowings from Britain, America, Belgium and Switzerland.

Middle Class

The fundamentalists parties have always been minorities, often deliberately adopting an elitist or underground organization and engaging in democratic politics reluctantly, if at all. Some Western political scientists have identified their social base as the traditional middle-class, overtaken by, and envious of, the new Westernized middle-class — an analysis which is perhaps less than fair. Minorities or not, they have moved recently from the periphery to the centre.

The Jama'at in Pakistan, which has never won more than a handful of seats in elections, is now the dominating civilian element in the government.

In Egypt, the Brotherhood, according to an informed diplomat, "is infiltrating the universities at speed. But we know little about them. Unlike Sadat's other opponents they don't see us as possible sympathisers. They don't want to meet us: for them, we have nothing to offer."

In Iran, the movement against the Shah has brought together both traditionalist and fundamentalist Moslems as well as Liberals and Leftists. The true strength of the Iranian fundamentalists has yet to be gauged but it is certainly considerable.

Could these people win the day in any of the Moslem countries? Each situation is naturally different. The antagonism of the affluent Persian middle-class — "It's a bad day for Iran when the Mullahs carry the torch of freedom," one intellectual complained at an earlier stage in the struggle — has its parallel in every Moslem society.

The fundamentalist critique of the West and of modern nationalism in the Moslem world has its obvious points. Many may even follow the idea that some kind of return to "religious values" presents a way out, or be attracted to some of the essentially humane intellectuals in the movement.

But the specific solution offered, in its rigidity and legalism and with its elitist and theocratic overtones, is another matter, seeming to open up another dimension of conflict and schism within societies which have known little else in their modern existence.

The Other War in Egypt

By IRENE BEESON

CAIRO — Vengeance is a dish best eaten cold, a French saying goes, and in Egypt recently, two avengers set up something of a record in the cooling-off period between deed and revenge.

A killer was murdered by his victim's son as he stepped out of prison after serving a 25-year sentence. And in the Delta village of Borra al Agouz, a man shot his uncle to death in revenge for the murder of his cousin 33 years ago.

According to recent official statistics, vendettas, feuds and crimes of honor are in regression in Egypt. Nevertheless, they still claim an average of 1,300 lives a year. The figure was 3,367 in 1938 and 2,834 in 1958. Over the past 40 years, the vendetta has killed 90,000 — as many or more than the four wars with Israel.

This last figure, released by the Central Agency for Public Mobilization and Statistics, shocked Egyptians who consider themselves, and rightly so, peaceable, easy-going and law-abiding to the point of submissiveness and resignation.

About 80 per cent of these crimes are committed in the countryside and more particularly in Upper Egypt, where both weather and blood are hotter than in the Delta.

Here the fellah who will submit passively to the worst kind of exploitation by his employer and rulers, will be roused to molten passion and uncharacteristic violence by any act or sword that touches his honor or dignity.

He will react with equal vehemence and out of all proportion to a wide range of "provocations". His wife or daughter's misconduct, real or imaginary, a slander or slur on them, himself or his family, stealing his crops or his farm animals, diverting his irrigation water, even as slight a misdemeanor as allowing a cow or buffalo to graze in his field, all expose the "culprit" to his wrath, which is assuaged only in blood.

Mostly he reacts on the spur of the moment, unthinkingly and regardless of the consequences to himself and his family.

Last September six people died and seven were injured in a village south of Cairo over grazing rights. A cow had strayed into a neighboring field. The owner objected. An exchange of words led to throwing stones and finally to a gun battle.

If a girl "dishonors" her family — this can range from exchanging glances or words with the wrong man to extramarital sex — her father or eldest brother is honor bound to kill her. If a man's wife commits adultery the sentence must be carried out by a member of her family to avoid a blood feud between his and her husband's families.

In most cases vengeance is swift, cruel and limited to the culprit. In others, however, a veritable slaughter ensues.

In Upper Egypt 27 men died and a number were wounded in a vendetta over a girl. Her "crime" was to have been asked in marriage by a "foreigner" from a neighboring village.

And in a village south of Cairo, 17 men were killed in a shoot-out when a young man proposed marriage to a girl whose parents had betrothed her to a suitor of their choice. The competing lovers called out their "armies". Both died on the village battlefield.

Sticks, stones, knives and vintage rifles dating back to the Second World War are the traditional weapons of the Egyptian countryside, but nowadays many vendettas are fought with modern arms.

Shoppers in a crowded grocery store in the Cairo suburb of Gizah thought it was armed robbery when a man with a machine-gun burst into the place. Before they could dive for cover, a hail of bullets killed 11 and wounded several more. In fact, the gunman's target was the owner of the shop, against whom he had a grudge — and he was unharmed.

Anti-aircraft weapons and guided missiles have been listed among weapons seized by the security forces in searches in Upper Egypt. The day is surely not far off when papa or big brother will not be satisfied with anything less than heat-seeking missiles to protect their womenfolk's virtue.

A Happy Canadian Story

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — Given the current political gloom it's nice to tell a heartening story, one that sketches both a family saga and the success of an immigrant in Canada.

The prime minister is considering who should be the successor to Jules Leger as Her Majesty's representative. As Christopher Young of Southams New Services wrote recently: "The most frequently mentioned name here is that of George Ignatieff, who is thought to have been ruled out five years ago because the government wanted a French-Canadian to follow Michener."

Who is George Ignatieff? What has been the career and the associations which have made him and his wife among the most repectfully-mentioned by such a significant columnist as Zena Cherry of the Toronto Globe & Mail?

Let me begin with George MacDonald Fraser, a British historian and writer of historical novels, including the best-selling Flashman sagas. Flashman was the bounder in the book Tom Brown's Schooldays. After expulsion from school he went on to a glorious military career, including winning the Victoria Cross.

In the '60s Fraser discovered by good luck the Flashman papers and diaries, out of which he has fashioned the Flashman sagas. I treasure each of the Flashman books but most of all Flashman At The Charge, about our hero in Russia as a captain after being in the lead of the famous "Charge of the Light Brigade" during the Crimean War (1850s!).

In dangerous captivity Flashman thinks he is rescued by the intervention of one Captain Count Nicholas Pavlovitch Ignatieff. Little did he appreciate what a steel-hard character was Ignatieff. Indeed, Ignatieff is such a capable villain that he appears again in another Flashman saga. But in this one, largely set in Russia, note no. 22 of author Fraser tells us that Ignatieff "was later to become one of Russia's most brilliant agents in the Far East. He served in China, undertook daring missions in Central Asia, and was also for a time military attache in London. There is evidence that early in the Crimean War he was serving in the Baltic, and this must have been shortly before his encounter with Flashman at this time."

I remembered that when I was around Varsity University of Toronto in the '40s there had been a Warden of Hart House called Nicholas Ignatieff. I remembered later when this particular Nicholas died that the obituaries said he had a brother George, and that his father was a Count Paul Ignatieff.

As a good librarian would I went off to catalogues and reference books and found all sorts of references to Fraser's Nicholas Ignatieff. One could say that between 1860 and 1882 he was a most important servant of the Tsar and a leader in extending Russian influence into Mongolia and to the Pacific, and south to the fringe of India and into Turkestan.

IGNATIEFF . . . next G-G?

From many accounts it became clear Flashman's Ignatieff was a rousing, magnetic, tough character. One book I came upon explained more about him as to family than any other. It was written by a nephew. Its title page read A Subaltern In Old Russia by Lieutenant-General A. A. Ignatyev of the "Red Army." The book was published in London in 1944. It has pictures of the author, a hero of the Soviet Union, and his famous Uncle Nick who was so cruel to Harry Flashman and such a threat to the empire of Queen Victoria in the 1850s and '60s.

The nephew notes the jump of the family to the formal aristocracy in the early 19th century. Historical records for the family go back in Moscow to the year 1340.

Nicholas of Flashman fame had seven children, the second of whom was Paul. This Count Paul was minister of Public Instruction in the Tsar's government in World War I. His Red cousin describes how an elderly and very wealthy relative on the maternal side of the Ignatieff family died during the war and, to wide surprise, left his wealth to Count Paul. Unfortunately, he ". . . was never fated to enjoy the fortune . . . owing to the October Revolution." The author went on: "Count Paul eked out his old age in poverty supporting himself by produce of his garden which he actually worked himself, in far-off Canada"

Of course, this Count Paul in Canada was the father of Nicholas and George, the George now being considered for the post of governor-general . . .

It's a story deserving a CBC-TV dramatization. The grandson of an architect of the Russian Empire in the Far East and a scheming rival of the British Empire may well become the representative of Victoria's great-great granddaughter. And as gloss to this happy Canadian story the possible G-G has had relatives most highly placed in the Soviet Red Army.

3 Ways To Collect Dividends

TORONTO (CP) — Jannock Ltd. of Toronto has announced plans to offer shareholders the option of receiving future dividends in cash, common shares or newly created third preference shares.

H. Gordon MacNeill, president and chief executive officer, said following a shareholders meeting the details will be sent to common stock holders in the new year on the options.

MacNeill also indicated that the present Class A and Class B shares will be reclassified into common shares Jan. 3.

Directors declared a dividend of 27 cents a share on Class A Shares, payable Jan. 2, and a dividend of 22.95 cents a share on Class B shares, payable Dec. 29.

It is expected the dividend on the reclassified common shares will be 27 cents a quarter. The usual dividend of 30 cents a share was declared on the second preference shares.

Ivaco Ltd.

Ivaco Ltd. reports profits of $6,693,000, or 68 cents a share, for the three months ended Sept. 30, 1978, more than triple the profits of $2,035,000, or 18 cents a share, for the corresponding period in 1977.

Paul Ivanier, Ivaco's president, said third-quarter results reflect a continuation of strong demand for the company's products.

Sales during the three-month period totalled $64.6 million, compared with $39.7 million for the corresponding period in 1977.

The company reported that net earnings for the nine months ended Sept. 30, 1978, were $16,382,000, or $1.66 a share, up from the $6,872,000, or 71 cents a share, posted in the nine months in 1977.

Total sales for the nine-month period in 1978 amounted to $187 million, compared with $122.2 million last year.

Iavco recently announced it plans to purchase controlling interest in National Wire Products of Baltimore, Md., in February, 1979.

Montreal Bk.

The Bank of Montreal reported an after-tax balance of revenue of $193.8 million, or $4.48 a share, for the year ended Oct. 31, a sharp rise from $71.5 million, or $3.18 a share, a year earlier.

Assets on Oct. 31 were $32.1 billion, up $6.9 billion or 27.5 per cent from the same day in 1977.

The after-tax balance of revenue for the fourth quarter was $60.1 million, or $1.35 a share, up 68.1 per cent from $35.8 million, or 90 cents a share, a year earlier.

Fred McNeil, the bank's chairman and chief executive officer, said in a statement that "very strong asset growth and continued close control of operating expenses" were the main reasons for the bank's performance.

Keg Rest.

Keg Restaurants Ltd. has reported net income of $521,705 or 24 cents a share for the nine months ended Sept. 30, compared with net income of $464,182 or 19 cents a share in the same period in 1977.

Revenues rose to $24,890,000 from $20,110,000.

Sales at wholly-owned restaurants dropped to $5,115,588 in the 1978 reporting period, from $8,053,839 in the same period last year.

UVic President Supports Mika

University of Victoria president Dr. Howard Petch agrees with Saanich Ald. John Mika that the provincial government should reimburse Saanich and Oak Bay for municipal services provided the university.

Mika on Monday talked the Capital Regional District's planning committee into recommending the regional board ask the government to pay general, debt and CRD levies on the university and Camosun College.

Petch said the university had a consistent policy even before he became president that the two municipalities should be reimbursed.

Instead of the government paying taxes, however, Petch said the university's policy was that the reimbursement should be in the form of a direct grant in lieu of taxes.

Plaza Plan to Get Airing

Saanich council's planning committee recommended Tuesday night that a public hearing be called on a proposal to develop a major shopping centre of 295,000 square feet on the site of the Tillicum drive-in theatre.

The recommendation to process the developer's application to hearing stage found committee backing despite warnings by municipal planner Gil Laurenson and Ald. John Mika that the shopping centre could jeopardize development of the Saanich civic core area between Seymour and Vernon.

Laurenson also expressed fears that the new development might harm business at the established local shopping centre at Gorge and Tillicum, and delay plans for a regional shopping centre serving the Western Community.

Mika claimed that although the centre planned by Cal Investments Ltd. of West Vancouver is technically just below the size of a regional shopping centre (300,000 square feet) it would be essentially regional in size and impact.

"It will have a major impact on the civic core," he told the committee.

"We can't ride half a dozen horses at the same time. We have to decide where our priorities are."

But Mayor Mel Couvelier said he couldn't share the alderman's concerns.

The mayor said he believes that to qualify as a "truly regional" shopping centre today a development must be at least 400,000 square feet, and the size of the proposed centre on the drive-in theatre site doesn't alarm him.

The company's plans for the 30-acre site include both a major and smaller department store, a large food store and park and ride facilities.

A spokesman attempted to assure committee members that the development would have minimal impact on established and planned shopping centres in Saanich and the Colwood-Langford area.

He said 75 per cent of the project's potential trading area lies outside the Western Community.

Saanich Residents Get Say On Subdivision

A public hearing will be called by Saanich council to consider a proposal to increase the subdivision minimum from five to 10 acres in much of rural Saanich lying outside the municipality's urban containment boundary.

Affected by the proposal would be all lands already within the Agricultural Land Reserve or designated as co-called conservation areas, but some upland areas would remain under the present five-acre minimum for subdivision purposes.

The proposal, presented to council's planning committee Tuesday night, is a modified version of an earlier recommendation from the planning department that all rural areas lying outside the urban containment boundary be covered by the 10-acre subdivision restriction.

The department had also suggested earlier that the doubling of the subdivision minimum apply to the Blenkinsop Valley, but aldermen decided against that Tuesday night because the whole question of the valley's boundaries is still under review.

Meanwhile, the committee took no action on a request by Blenkinsop Valley land owners to rescind a one-year-old resolution declaring the valley an agricultural greenbelt.

Several property owners who attended the meeting repeated earlier complaints that the freeze was discriminatory because it denied them the right to develop land which, they claim, is unsuitable for farming.

One resident said if the valley is to be preserved for esthetic greenbelt purposes Saanich should not "confer a public benefit at private expense" but should purchase the land from public funds.

Poking Into Family Affairs

Not all things are relative or all in the family as far as Saanich council is concerned, and that's why aldermen want to plug a loophole in the municipality's subdivision restrictions.

The specific problem involves the so-called relative clause under the Municipal Act, which allows a property owner to subdivide his property to provide a home for a relation.

For some time officials have been concerned that the system was open to abuse by individuals who, having obtained subdivision approval, promptly sold the sliced-off parcel to the highest bidder.

But in future offficials will take a tougher stand, council's planning committee was told Tuesday night.

Municipal planner Gil Laurenson said in a report that as approving officer he is prepared to refuse any subdivision application under the relative clause where the land remaining does not meet the minimum lot area for the subdivision district in which the property is located.

"This proposal will not prohibit subdivision under the relative clause but it will certainly restrict or limit it," he said.

RIVITON TOY RECALLED AFTER TWO TOTS KILLED

A plastic construction toy has been recalled by its manufacturer across North America after two children died while playing with it in the U.S.

They had swallowed tiny rubber rivets that come with the Riviton set.

Only a few sets were believed sold in Victoria before the recall order was received.

The toy features plastic girders and similar devices but it was the tiny rivets that caused both fatalities.

The maker, Parker Brother's Ltd., called back the toy when the deaths were reported.

In Saskatoon, a product safety instructor with the federal consumer and corporate affairs office said he does not think the Riviton toy is dangerous.

Ron Loomis said almost any toy could cause death and the real fault lies with the parents.

Full Thetis Study Urged

A complete study of the city-owned 1,400-acre Thetis Lake watershed and its dedication as a public recreational area was urged today.

Botanist Dr.Adam Szczawinski, one of the founders of the Thetis Park Nature Sanctuary issued the call.

"Before any decision is made to raise the level of the upper and lower lakes, the city should approve a study to look into every aspect of the watershed — its water, wildlife, fisheries and forest as well as its recreational aspects," he said, adding that the study should be undertaken by independent professionals and not by the city.

The B.C. Wildlife branch has proposed raising the level of the lower lake by two feet and the upper lake by five feet.

The lakes would act as storage basins to provide additional water during the summer season for cutthroat fry.

Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf has urged Victoria to go ahead with the project despite opposition from the Thetis asssociation.

The association says the project would cause extensive damage to the park and to trees.

"For once let us do things properly," Szcawinski said.

A car parked beside the Thetis Lake campgrounds near the Trans-Canada Highway was gutted by fire Tuesday night.

Colwood RCMP said the owner, Patricia Page, 21, of 3-1938 Trans-Canada, was driving along the highway at about 9 p.m. when she smelled gas and burning rubber and stopped to investigate.

When she couldn't get the car started again, she decided to walk home.

Bases Do a Number On Forces' Letters

TORONTO (CP) — Letters sent to members of the Canadian armed forces may not reach their destination unless the serviceman's social insurance number is on the envelope.

Maj. Geoffrey Haswell said Tuesday that mail sent without the number to servicemen stationed in Canada has been marked incomplete address and returned. Sometimes, base mailroom staff use a rubber stamp advising that "military address must include rank, surname, initials and social insurance number."

Haswell said most mail without the number will reach its destination but it is possible mailroom staff might follow the book to the letter.

Leonard Jones, independent member of Parliament for Moncton, said about 30 of 375 letters he sent to constituents serving overseas and in Canada but who maintain a Moncton residence for voting purposes were returned.

Two of the letters were marked "no social insurance number." The others were marked "incomplete address," he said in an interview from Ottawa.

Jones said he does not want to know the social insurance numbers of his constituents and the numbers shouldn't be known by every postman in the country.

Haswell said use of the numbers for addresses began when the three branches of the armed forces were merged in the mid-1960s.

TRAWLER CREW SHOT

LAS PALMAS, Canary Islands (Reuter) — Eight crew members died in a machine-gun attack on a Spanish trawler off the coast of Western Sahara Tuesday night, informed sources said today.

Three fishermen aboard the trawler Cruz del Mar escaped on a liferaft as the attackers raked the vessel with bullets, firing from rubber dinghies. The three were later picked up by another Spanish fishing boat, the Chico Grande.

Depression Thoughts Drive Him Bananas

WASHINGTON (AP) — "The danger of a serious banana is increased if we do not bring the inflation rate down," says Alfred Kahn.

Did he say banana?

"We went through the deepest banana in 35 years," added Kahn about the recession of 1974-75.

He did. He said banana.

But why?

Why would the chairman of the Council on Wage and Price Stability substitute "banana" for "depression" and "recession" when talking to reporters?

Because some people in the White House were irked two weeks ago when he predicted the U.S. might face a deep depression if President Carter's new anti-inflation program doesn't work.

All he had meant, Kahn said, was that he is "persuaded the danger of a serious recession would be enhanced if we didn't try to bring inflation down."

From now on, Kahn told the Washington Press Club Tuesday, "You'll never hear the word depression come from me."

Sedlbauer Powers Canucks To Win

Times News Services

Ron Sedlbauer, the 6-foot-3 left wing of Vancouver Canucks, is off to his fastest start in five National Hockey League seasons, and coach Harry Neale thinks he knows why.

"It's consistency," said Neale after watching Sedlbauer explode for three goals and an assist to spearhead Vancouver's 6-3 triumph Tuesday night over St. Louis Blues in St. Louis.

"Sedlbauer's always had a lot of talent. I had him in juniors. This year, he comes to the rink prepared to play. Too many times before, he didn't. It's a mental thing."

Sedlbauer, the Canucks' top draft choice in 1974, agreed.

"I think it has to do with sacrificing some of the things I'd been doing off the ice," he suggested. "Sometimes I'd get to the rink and have trouble concentrating on what I was doing. That's basically what it is. It takes a little while for you to learn."

St. Louis, the NHL's most lenient team on defence, can attest to the effects of Sedlbauer's improvement.

With 10:40 gone in the first period, he fired in the rebound of a slapshot by Rick Blighton on a Vancouver power play. Nine minutes later, he converted Chris Oddleifson's pass into another goal, and with 1:39 left in a four-goal Canucks second period, he scored his third.

It was the 24-year-old forward's second three-goal NHL night, increasing his season's goal production to 15 in the Canucks' 23 games.

Sedlbauer's third goal opened a 6-1 Vancouver advantage, more than enough to withstand Blues' goals during the final 20 minutes by John Smrke and Larry Giroux. It was the Canucks' fifth win in their last six contests away from home.

"We're 6-6-1 against teams in our own division," remarked Neale of the team's success against its Smythe Division foes, "and I think that's what's going to count the most."

The Canucks, in addition to points by Sedlbauer, boosting his total to nine in four games, received three assists from Harold Snepsts and two from Oddleifson. Don Lever added a goal and an assist.

"We're doing a few things right, but we're not as good a hockey club as I'd like for us to be," said Neale. "We moved the puck and checked people off tonight the way we're supposed to."

In Montreal, the Canadiens' production line clicked for all three goals in a 3-0 Montreal triumph over Philadelphia Flyers, but there was a new left winger on the line.

Guy Lafleur, the National Hockey League's scoring champion for the past three seasons, got the first two Montreal goals and centreman Jacques Lemaire scored the third into an empty net in the dying seconds of the game.

Bob Gainey, generally acclaimed as the best defensive forward in the league, replaced Steve Shutt at left wing on the Canadiens big line. Gainey supplied the needed muscle for Lafleur and Lemaire and they did the rest.

"Mostly I just tried to stay out of their way," Gainey said.

"They're (Lafleur and Lemaire) so good with the puck and so fast that they don't have to worry about muscling other guys off the puck. They usually control it when they're on the ice.

"I don't think I'll be staying on that line. This was just to shake things up a little. It's a line that has proven itself in the past and there is really no need to change it."

Shutt played on several lines during the game and, apart from a two-on-one break he had with Guy Lapointe, was ineffective. Shutt, one of Montreal's top-three scorers in each of the last three seasons, has only six goals in 23 games during this campaign.

TRACY PRATT'S DEBUT MARRED BY FLYER LOSS

Former National Hockey League defenceman Tracy Pratt made a losing debut as a British Columbia Junior Hockey League coach when Abbotsford Flyers dropped a 7-5 decision Tuesday to cellar-dwelling Delta Suns.

Earlier in the day, Pratt, 35, replaced Buster Brayshaw, once coach of Edmonton Oil Kings when they won the Memorial Cup. Brayshaw was appointed earlier this year when Doug Sauter took a coaching position with Calgary Wranglers of the Western Hockey League.

Pratt played in the NHL for Oakland Seals, Buffalo Sabres, Vancouver Canucks, Colorado Rockies, Pittsburgh Penguins and Toronto Maple Leafs. He was released by Toronto prior to the 1977-78 season.

It was Delta's fourth win in 28 starts. They trail Abbotsford by 15 points in the league's Coast Division.

In other games, Vernon Canadians stopped Penticton Vees 9-4, Merritt Centennials doubled Kamloops Rockets 6-3 and Langley Lords edged Chilliwack Colts, 5-4.

In Delta, three of the Suns' goals were scored on power plays as the Flyers took 34 minutes in penalties, including two fighting majors, compared with only 14 minutes assessed against Delta.

Abbotsford led 2-1 at the end of the first period but Delta led 5-4 after two.

Bullets Better Than Ever; Jazz Draw Record Crowd

By The Canadian Press

Washington Bullets were good enough to win the National Basketball Association championship last season, yet Bullets veteran Elvin Hayes thinks they're even better this year.

"This is the best we have ever played," Hayes said Tuesday night after scoring 35 points and pulling down 16 rebounds in the Bullets' 133-106 romp over New York Knicks. "Even last year, we didn't play any better than this."

It was the eighth consecutive victory for the Bulls—their longest winning streak in a decade and just one short of the franchise record.

Elsewhere Tuesday, New Orleans Jazz upended Philadelphia 76ers 107-103, Chicago Bulls dumped Phoenix Suns 124-112, Cleveland Cavaliers defeated Atlanta Hawks 112-98, Milwaukee Bucks downed Denver Nuggets 117-100, Detroit Pistons edged Los Angeles Lakers 105-103 and Portland Trail Blazers outlasted Boston Celtics 102-97.

The Bullets shot 52 per cent from the field and outrebounded New York 64-42 in the lopsided affair, which was New York's first major test since Red Holzman replaced Willis Reed as coach—a test they flunked badly. The Knicks had won six of seven games against weak or injury-depleted teams but were no match for the Bullets.

Bobby Dandridge added 22 points for the Bullets and Greg Ballard and Kevin Grevey had 14 apiece. Spencer Haywood, starting in place of the injured Bob McAdoo, led the Knicks with 18 points.

Washington was coached by Bernie Bickerstaff, Dick Motta's assistant who filled in because Motta underwent surgery Monday for torn cartilage in his left knee. It was the first time Motta had missed a game in 26 years as a pro and college coach.

The victory, coupled with Philadelphia's loss, gave Washington a one-game lead over the '76ers in the Atlantic Division.

Pete Maravich scored 32 points and forward Truck Robinson got 30 points and 22 rebounds to lead New Orleans past Philadelphia before an NBA single-game, regular-season record crowd of 35,139.

The Jazz shut out Philadelphia forward Julius Erving through the second half. Erving, the NBA's seventh-highest scorer, finished the night with 14 points. Doug Collins led Philadelphia scoring with 25 points.

Artis Gilmore scored 28 points and grabbed 17 rebounds, while Mickey Johnson and Reggie Theus clicked for 27 points for Chicago. The win was the Bulls' fourth in their last seven games, but only their sixth against 16 losses this season. Phoenix had its winning streak snapped at five games.

Campy Russell scored 14 of his game-high 26 points in the fourth quarter to lead Cleveland over Atlanta. The Cavaliers led 43-30 at one point in the second quarter, but the Hawks battled back and the score was tied 77-77 at the end of three quarters. Then Cavaliers came alive again to surge ahead, outscoring Atlanta 14-4 in the first five minutes of the fourth period.

It was the second straight victory for the Cavaliers after a long slump in which they lost 14 of 15 games.

PAPER SNOWSTORM AS CHAMPS REPEAT

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Perotti scored two goals, and Boca Juniors and 50,000 of their fans put on a display of offensive power and football fanaticism Tuesday night as the Argentine team won its second straight South American soccer championship.

Boca, getting goals from its three forwards and blunting their rivals' counter-attack, scored a 4-0 victory over Deportivo Cali of Colombia in the final of the Liberators Cup series.

Boca was unable to beat Cali last week in Colombia, but that match ended in a scoreless tie, setting up the contest here.

Garry Jolts Bruins To Help the Cats

CALGARY — Former Victorian Garry Slezak gave Victoria Cougars a helping hand Tuesday by leading Calgary Wranglers to a 4-2 Western Hockey League victory over New Westminster Bruins in front of 2,614 fans.

Slezak fired two goals to lead the attack as Wranglers counted three unanswered goals in the second period to win the only league game of the night.

Singles were added by Ralph Krueger and Bill McLean while John Ogrodnick scored both New Westminster markers.

Bruins led 1-0 after the first period but Calgary dominated the second period and entered the final 20 minutes of the game with a 3-1 advantage.

Rokkudan for Inouye

Inouye, who is zone director at Victoria Judo Club this weekend for eliminations leading to the B.C. Winter Games in Kamloops, has been promoted to Rokkudan.

This ranking of sixth-degree black belt is held by only seven other people in Canada.

Inouye, who founded the Victoria Club in 1957, has been active in the sport for more than 40 years and occupies the positions of chairman of the B.C. Referees' Committee, the B.C. Grading Board and is a member of the selection team which will choose a provincial team for the Canada Winter Games at Brandon in Febrary.

Inouye expects between 20 and 30 competitors from Victoria, Nanaimo, Comox and Campbell River will enter the eliminations Saturday at 715 Johnson Street.

RAMS, PANTHERS EYE BAYS' CROWN

BRAVES TO PREPARE IN HAWAII

Is This Year for Change In School Basketball?

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

A high school basketball season without Oak Bay Bays ruling the roost? The mere thought could get you committed.

But such thoughts have occurred this year to several coaches who, apparently of sound mind, believe Bays' six-year reign as kings of the Lower Island may end.

Mt. Douglas Rams and Parkland Panthers are considered the most likely successors if, indeed, the Bays are to be deposed.

Seven schools — Mount Doug, Oak Bay, Parkland, Belmont, Esquimalt, Spectrum and Vic High — then enter "AA" playoffs while the remaining four — Reynolds, Claremont, Dunsmuir and Stelly's — go into "A" playdowns for schools with fewer than 200 boys in grades 11 and 12.

A team-by-team rundown:

Belmont Braves: Coach Muzz Bryant moves up from Belmont Juniors and inherits a good assortment of holdovers, among them guards Vince Tuele, Russ Urlacher and Steve Salt, forward John Franks (6'5") and centres Tom Raine (6'6") and Craig Barnes (6'4"). Gone are starters Steve Berry, Don Davenport, Ken Horwood, Tom Lequesne and Dean St. Pierre but newcomers include forwards Al Cole and Ken Whittaker from Belmont Juniors and forward Mark Haas and guard Fred Burke from Spencer.

Claremont Spartans: Coach Doug Latta has lost Glenn Davidson and scoring leader Mike Toakley but has returnees Walt Phillips, Glen Robertson and Mike Smith, all 6'4" forwards. His most promising newcomers are guards Jamie Shypipka and Chris Bryant, both up from Claremont Juniors.

Dunsmuir Demons: The school didn't have a team last year but coach Gary Woodburn has good propspects in Dean St. Pierre, a transfer from Belmont, forward Carson Coppin and guards Mark Nelson and Tim Dean.

Esquimalt Dockers: Dallas Lansdell starts his third year as coach with starting holdovers in forwards Tom Pollard (6'5") and Andy Aylesworth (6'3"), along with guards Greg Webber and Mike Barber. He loses forward Bill Barber, his top scorer-rebounder and the team captain last year.

Mount Doug Rams: Coach Rick Humber has lost Jeff Warren, Grant Main, Richard Avery and Grant Thompson but his returnees include guards Russ Mosher and Russ Thornton and forwards Vince Cullen, Chuck Francis and Brian Alexander. An excellent crop of newcomers includes Jay Loukes (6'5") from Oak Bay Junior, Ian Lang (6'5") from Arbutus, Rod Bergman, who missed last year with injuries, Peter Bryant, up from the Mount Doug "B" team, twin guards Greg and Grant Stark from Ottawa and guard Mike Hanson from Peterborough, Ont.

Oak Bay Bays: Don Horwood is continuing his education at the University of Alberta. Dave Morgan takes over as coach but he's missing four top-ranked starters in Ken Kirzinger, Kelly Dukeshire, Blair Boland and Tih Tan. Top prospects include guard-forward Wayne Andrews (6'3") and newcomers John Hewer, a guard from Ottawa, and forward Randy Hess, up from Oak Bay Juniors.

Parkland Panthers: The way coach Joe Milligan sees it, Panthers' fortunes will depend on the health of returning forward Greg Wiltjer (6'9") who played for a suburban Melbourne club in Australia last summer on a basketball exchange program. Wiltjer ruptured ankle ligaments and underwent surgery a month ago but may be ready by January. Also back is team scoring leader Quinn Groenhyde, recovering from a pulled back muscle, forward John Ibbotson (6'4") and guards Dexter Williams and Alan Benn. Gone is rebound leader Dwight Joinson. Top necomer is Gordon Fox from Parkland Juniors.

Reynolds Roadrunners: New coach Garry Lietch has returnees Darryl Richardson, Rod Chow and Scott Robertson at guard and forward Doug Sutherland. Best newcomers are Jim Johnson, Dave Maier and Ron Chadwick, all up from Reynolds Juniors.

Spectrum: It's a rebuilding year for new coach Mike Squires but there are some returnees, including centre Tom Kostek and Maurice McMurdo (6'5") and forwards Brian Foster and Rick Clarke. Most promising newcomer is guard Ron Crabbe.

Stelly's Stingers: Coach Peter Mason has holdovers Derek Peters and Dan Barney at guard, John Kristiansen (6'5") at centre and forwards Glen Pettinger and Tom Sandwith. Rookie Darrell Ell is expected to alternate at guard with Barney.

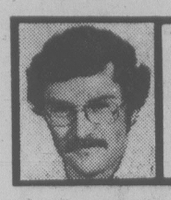

Vic High Totems: Coach Ash Valdal has top all-rounder Wayne Russell back along with forward Terry Harris and guard Gordie Taylor. Gone are forwards Bob Godfrey, Dean Potter and Harvey Thoreau and guards Kris Adams and Stan Chang. Best of the newcomers are guard Darryl Adams, Kris' brother from Central Junior High, and centre Darren Alexander from Lansdowne.

PANTHER ON RAMPAGE

Groenheyde went on a scoring rampage for a remarkable 52-point total with Parkland Panthers, who were beaten 90-82 by defending British Columbia champion Nanaimo Islanders in a pre-season exhibition high school boys' basketball game.

Skiers: Think Snow; The Season Is Here

Are you ready?

For skiing, that is.

Because if the snow falling Tuesday morning on Whistler and Grouse continues, the long-awaited ski season should get into full swing this weekend.

Grouse has been operating in a limited way with its snow-making equipment and Whistler is expected to open shortly.

Just in time too. From what we hear, this has been the latest Whistler has opened with the exception of that disasterous season two years ago.

Well, this writer is ready — perhaps for the first time since getting hooked on the sport.

One of the first things to do prior to the start of the season is to check your equipment. Ski shops get notoriously busy just prior to opening day.

Finding a loose edge, grit in a binding or gouges in a base can put a crimp on that first day on the slopes. It also could conceivably lead to a disastrously short season.

My skis are getting the full pre-season treatment — filled bases, a hot wax job and new bindings.

The bindings will incorporate a set of ski brakes, completely eliminating the nuisance of safety straps. The system is gaining acceptance throughout North America because of the safety factor — not to mention convenience.

Research has found about eight to 10 per cent of ski injuries during falls have been caused by windmilling skis attached to a safety strap. The majority of these injuries have been to the face, head and leg.

The brakes, which consist of two spurs on each side of the ski under the boot, are released and dig into the snow when the foot comes out of the binding. This slows the ski to a gradual stop above the fallen skier.

In addition, it eliminates the danger of a runaway ski caused by safety straps snapping in a fall or by the ski sliding away from a skier attempting to re-enter his bindings on a steep slope.

The bottom line is blunt. General use of brakes could reduce all ski injuries by eight to 10 per cent and head injuries by 50 per cent.

And speaking about injuries, everyone who skis should have been tuning themselves up during the past couple of months.

A proper balance of stretching and muscle-building exercises in addition to activities which tone up the cardiovascular system will your skiing and reduce the risk of injury.

Working out on a weight machine, skipping and riding an exercise bike twice a week for the past few months have helped get this writer into a little better condition.

In addition to tuning up both equipment and yourself, what about the vehicle you use to reach the ski area?

It too should be checked out before taking it into the mountains, snow and sub-zero weather.

The battery should be in top condition — starting a vehicle in cold weather puts a tremendous drain on the electrical system.

Check out all hoses in the cooling system cracks or weak spots and replace if neccessary. Flush out the system and replace with anti-freeze sufficient for the temperatures you're likely to encounter.

Another part of the vehicle often overlooked until too late is the condition of the tread on your snow tires. If there isn't enough to last through the season — get new ones now and avoid winding up in a snowbank.

Chains, too, are often mandatory for access to ski areas. Make sure no cross-bars or links are worn or missing.

Lastly, get the engine tuned. It will pay off in the long run.

Campbell Knocked -'Trying Too Hard'

HOUSTON (AP) — Criticism of Houston Oilers' use of rookie sensation Earl Campbell has come full circle and taken off on a new tangent.

First, some critics said the 1977 Heisman Trophy winner didn't carry the ball enough, then he carried it too much and now some have said he won't last long in the National Football League because he tries too hard.

The latter appraisal came from several Cincinnati players after Campbell had battered out 122 yards on 27 carries in a 17-10 victory last Sunday to protect his league rushing lead.

"I can't understand the things the Cincinnati players said," Oilers coach O. A. (Bum) Phillips said. "Maybe that's why they're 1-12. Maybe they're the ones who can't take it."

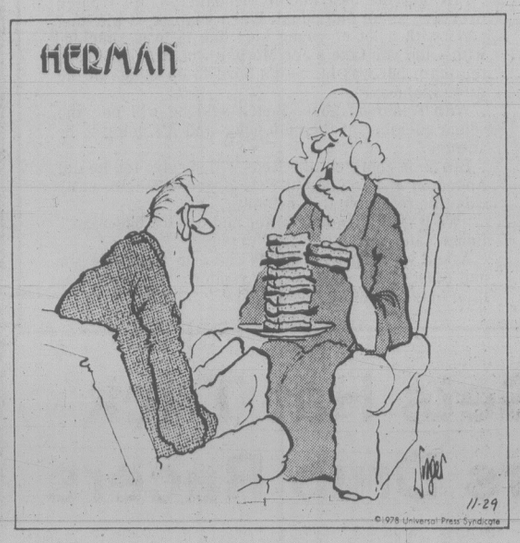

University of Houston coach Bill Yeoman, a vocal fan of Campbell dating back to the days when Campbell pounded out yardage against the Cougars as a member of the University of Texas team, had even stronger comments.

"I think it's an unfortunate thing when other players in the NFL suggest the possibility that Earl may not last as long because he's trying so hard," Yeoman said. "That's a dadgum shame. He's a perfect example of increased productivity and that's what this country needs.

"I know that it has become apparent to his team-mates as they looked at their performances earlier in the year and watched him that they might not have been as enthusiastic as he is. His attitude has permeated through the whole group."

One of the Bengals' comments came from defensive end Gary Burley, who said "Campbell's a helluva back. But how can he keep that up? I hope he doesn't intend to run that hard his whole career. I mean, if he does, I don't see how he can last as long as he should. But maybe I'm wrong. Maybe he's Superman."

While the debate goes on, Campbell continues his record-setting rookie season. Going into Sunday's showdown against Pittsburgh Steelers, Campbell already holds the NFL rookie rushing record with 1,265 yards this season.

"Why didn't you say you wanted a sandwich while I was in the kitchen?"

Stenmark Wins Special Slalom

STELVIO, Italy (AP) — World Cup holder Ingmar Stenmark of Sweden won the men's special slalom of the World Series skiing competition today, clocking a total time of one minute 50.87 seconds.

The Swede clocked the second fastest time in both heats to finish ahead of West Germany's Christian Neureuther who won the second run. The German veteran had a time of 1:51.13.

Liechtenstein's Paul Frommelt clocked the fastest time in the first heat down the icy track of the Stelvio glacier and placed third in the overall standings in 1:51.18.

Stenmark clocked heat times of 57.96 and 52.91 seconds, scoring his first victory in the new season.

He had finished second in a slalom race at Val Senales, Italy, on Saturday, behind Bulgaria's Peter Popangelov.

Stenmark said he had to push hard and take some risk to gain victory against the challenge from Frommelt and Neureuther.

"For sure there is more of a balance of power this season than in the past," the Swede said.

Sims Sixth Junior To Win Griffin Only One to Repeat

NEW YORK (AP) — Six players have won the Heisman Trophy as juniors, but only one—Archie Griffin of Ohio State—repeated as a senior.

Oklahoma's Billy Sims has a chance to follow in Griffin's footsteps and he plans to give it a shot.

Although his original class at the University of Oklahoma will graduate next June, Sims has another year of eligibility remaining. And after he was announced Tuesday as the winner of the 44th-annual Heisman Trophy as the top college football player in the United States, he said he will be back to try for two in a row.

"I'll just play like I did this year and let things fall in place," said the six-foot, 205-pound junior running back from Hooks, Tex., who missed almost all of the 1976 season with an injury.

"I am not going to go in the (National Football League) draft. I am coming back to school. A degree is something no one can take away from you."

Sims's narrow Heisman victory over Penn State quarterback Chuck Fusina by a point total of 827-750 was the second closest ever and Fusina actually received 12 more first-place votes than Sims. The only closer Heisman voting occurred in 1956 when Notre Dame's Paul Hornung edged Johnny Majors of Tennessee by 72 points.

Sims is the country's leading rusher and scorer and smashed the Oklahoma and Big Eight Conference single-season records by gaining 1,762 yards in 11 games and scoring 20 touchdowns while averaging 7.6 yards per carry. He tied a national record by rushing for 200 or more yards in three consecutive games.

"I never thought I would win it, but I thought I was going to be close," Sims said.

"I'm really flattered about the way it came out," Fusina said. "I'm honored just to be mentioned. To come in second is really something. I really didn't expect to win the Heisman and to get all those votes really shocked me."

HODGSON WANTS TIME

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts owner Bill Hodgson has set a deadline of Dec. 15 for his decision on whether to sell the Canadian Football League club or continue operating it himself.

Hodgson had been scheduled to meet CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur but Gaudaur said Hodgson is taking more time.

Hodgson earlier attempted to sell his 60 per-cent interest to Agincourt Football Enterprises Ltd., a group headed by Douglas Bassett, but The CFL executive committee turned down the proposed sale.

'Unsettling', Says Bench; 'I Don't Like It': Morgan

CINCINNATI (AP) — After spending almost a decade with Sparky Anderson, catcher Johnny Bench of Cincinnati Reds says "it's going to be difficult walking into the clubhouse."

Second baseman Joe Morgan didn't mince words: "I don't like it."

They were reacting to the bombshell Tuesday that Anderson had been fired as manager by the National League baseball team and replaced by John McNamara.

"Very unsettling," said Bench, describing his emotion when informed of the development. "My throat was down in my stomach when I heard it."

He added, however, that he talked to McNamara by telephone and welcomed him to the team.

"I don't know if I would have settled on anyone other than John McNamara."

Morgan said in a radio interview that he was stunned by the announcement.

"I've come to be a Sparky Anderson fan. I never thought of him as a manager, but as a friend. He's above the pettiness in baseball."

Morgan defended Anderson at the end of the season, taking exception to remarks by Bench that the long-time Reds' manager had lost control of the team.

"Some things were said that it was his fault, and stuff like that, that weren't true," said Morgan, speaking from his home in Oakland.

"He got the best out of the ballclub. He treated everyone as an individual. When you take a pitching staff with a lot of young kids like he was shackled with—and you take a Joe Morgan who usually helped the team but was hurt—it's hard to do things in the same manner."

With Anderson gone, Bench said he will be "the senior member of the club now—and it's going to be strange."

But he is confident the Reds will survive the loss of Anderson and free agent Pete Rose, who apparently won't be returning to Cincinnati.

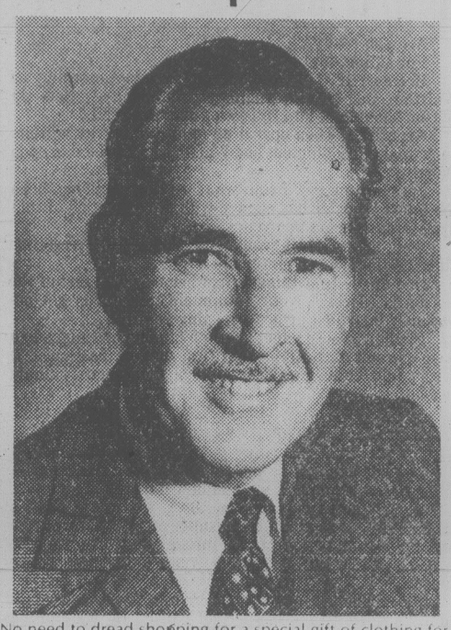

"We'll find a lead-off hitter and a third baseman," Bench said. "We'll be ready to play."

Asked why the front office chose to fire Anderson and most of his staff, Bench replied, "Maybe it was time to clean out all the cobwebs."

Weir Gets Hat Trick As Oilers Drub Racers

EDMONTON (CP) — Centre Stan Weir registered his first major-league three-goal performance Tuesday night to pace Edmonton Oilers to an 8-2 victory over Indianapolis Racers.

The win, Edmonton's fifth in a row and its longest winning streak since 1973, moved the Oilers to a third-place tie with Quebec Nordiques, each with 22 points.

The game looked ridiculously easy for the Oilers, who scored four goals in a row in the first two periods after Indianapolis scored first. Edmonton then got four unanswered goals in the third period.

Dennis Sobchuk, Doug Berry, Bill Flett, Blair MacDonald and Paul Shmyr also scored for the Oilers. The crowd of 8,205, reduced because of the poor Indianapolis record and slippery driving conditions outside, watched Dave Morrow and Bruce Greig tally for the Racers, who trailed 2-1 and 4-2 by periods.

Wayne Gretzky, Edmonton's 17-old-year centre, extended his personal scoring streak to 11 points in nine games when he assisted on Flett's sixth goal of the season earlier in the third period.

Soccer Tourney Expanded To Include School Squads

For the first time, school teams will be included this year in the University of Victoria's annual Christmas indoor soccer tournament.

Open only to senior teams from the Vancouver Island Soccer League in previous years, the five-a-side tourney has been expanded with the addition of three divisions (elementary, junior high and senior high) for school squads.

This year's event is scheduled Dec. 27 - 30 at the McKinnon Gymnasium with games again to be of 20-minutes duration played under special rules.

Schools have until Dec. 4 to submit entries to Mike Elcock, manager of athletics and recreation services at UVic.

Braves Pull Rabbit Trick

Braves, who occupy first place in the South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League, scored all their goals in the final 10 minutes of the second period to overcome a 3-0 deficit and gain a 4-4 tie with third-place Esquimalt Legion Blues.

Neither team scored in the third period.

Russ Kennedy, Terry Parsons, Ron Brooks and Kelly Bryant scored for Esquimalt, which led 2-0 after the first frame.

ROSE STOPS OFF IN KANSAS CITY

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Pete Rose and his lawyer met for 2½ hours Tuesday with Ewing Kauffman, owner of Kansas City Royals, who said later the American League baseball club "has a 50-50 chance" of signing the free agent player.

"The only thing that might stop us from getting him is the National League thing," Kauffman later told reporters.

Kauffman said he countered Rose's oft-stated desire to go after Stan Musial's National League hitting record by telling him he could wind up his illustrious career as a designated hitter in pursuit of Ty Cobb's all-time hit total.

"I told him I knew a few things about him," said Kauffman. "I told him I knew he had a little girl and a little boy, that he was a great baseball player, and that he only needed 1,068 hits to break Mr. Cobb's record. His eyes sort of lit up and he said 'I didn't know that.'"

Monday, Rose had lunch with Ted Turner of Atlanta Braves. Today he is due in Philadelphia as he seeks to deal himself to the highest bidder as a free agent.

Seattle Seahawks Like Second Dallas

By The Associated Press

The master builder of the National Football League's defending Super Bowl champions has to get as much credit as anyone for turning the Seahawks, a two-year-old expansion team when the season began, into a potential division champion.

Brandt, Dallas's director of personnel development, lost his assistant, Dick Mansperger, to Seattle when the team was formed in 1976. Since then, a veritable posse of Cowboys has trotted off to the Northwest to turn the Seahawks into quick winners.

Jim Zorn, Efren Herrera, Steve August, Tom Lynch, Terry Beeson, Duke Fergerson, Bill Gregory, Ron Howard—virtually all are starters on a team which won just two games two years ago, was 5-9 last year and now has a 7-6 record.

He instantly became the Seahawks' No. 1 quarterback.

"Zorn has matured a great deal," says John Thompson, the Seahawks' general manager. "He's a much better quarterback today than he was a year ago. Today, he's as good as the top quarterbacks in the league."

Herrera was dealt away by Dallas this year when he demanded a richer contract.

Starting on one end of the defensive line is Gregory, acquired from Dallas for a middle-round draft choice. Starting at tight end is Howard, a gift from the veteran allocation draft held when the league stocked the Seattle and Tampa Bay rosters.

The quartet of Beeson, Lynch, August and Fergerson is the result of the pre-draft deal that enabled the Cowboys to pick Tony Dorsett.

The Cowboys got one player—a star, to be sure—but only one player. The Seahawks got the foundation for a franchise.

"There's no question but that we've often said we're modelling our franchise after the successful expansion franchises ahead of us, and Dallas certainly is one of those," says Thompson.

"This year, by beating Minnesota and, two weeks later, Oakland for the first time, that's when we became a football team."

It's Muhammad Ali Boulevard

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — After long controversy, Muhammad Ali's home town honored its most famous sports figure Tuesday, naming a five-mile stretch of inner-city street for the heavyweight boxing champion.

An ordinance transforming Walnut Street and Michigan Drive into Muhammad Ali Boulevard, passed Nov. 14 by the board of aldermen, was signed by mayor William Stansbury.

New street signs will cost about $3,000 and can be installed in about two weeks, officials said.

Watters Would Like to Know

TORONTO (CP) — Bill Watters has very reason to be feeling a little restless.

Watters, general manager of the Canadian entry in the Izvestia tournament to be held next month in Moscow, has yet to have a player named for the squad.

Under a formula worked out by the National Hockey League, each of the 17 NHL club's must give the Izvestia team at least one player under contract. If the player is on the NHL roster, Watters must receive permission to enlist tht player. If the player is with a minor-league affiliate, he can be taken from the club in question.

"The complexities are so manifold," Watters said Monday. " But hopefully we can finalize a team by next Wednesday. Injuries could play havoc with our decision making."

Watters said that he will submit a list of potential players to the NHL's general mangers by Friday. He will then attempt to get a commitment on a player by next Wedesday.

"Even then we can't be certain on a player's availability," Watters said.

The type of player Watters and coach Marshall Johnson are looking at has to have good mobility and be able to cover a lot of territory on the larger European ice surface.

It was imperative, said Watters, that the team be selected as soon as possible because of other complications involving passports and Soviet visas.

The team is scheduled to leave Dec. 11 for Stockholm where it will play the Swedish national B team in an exhibition match. In Moscow the team will play Finland, Czechoslovakia, the Soviet Union and Sweden in a six-day span before returning Dec. 22.

Dyer Signs Expo Pact

MONTREAL (CP) — Catcher Duffy Dyer, who decided to become a free agent after 10 seasons in major league baseball, has signed a three-year contract with Montreal Expos.

Dyer, 33, spent the last four seasons with Pittsburgh Pirates. He led the league in fielding percentage in 1977 as he committed only two errors for a .996 mark.

Fastest Three-Year-Old Syndicated for $3.6M

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Falcon Almahurst, the fastest three-year-old pacer of all time, has been syndicated for a record-tying $3.6 million, owner Charles D. Hill announced Tuesday.

The syndication price equals the harness horse record set by Nero, syndicated as a four-year-old, and establishes a new syndication standard for three-year-old pacers.

Hill, who purchased Falcon Almahurst for $150,000 as a yearling, said the syndicate stands at 21 shareholders.

Now retired to stud, Falcon Almahurst won more than $400,000 in his two racing seasons. He posted the fastest mile trip ever by a three-year-old, a time of 1:52 2-5 at Lexington, Ky.

He also ranks as the swiftest pacer of any age on a half-mile track after going 1:55 2-5 in winning a division of the Little Brown Jug at Delaware this fall.

Kings Give Rookie Goalie Multi-Year Contract

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles Kings of the National Hockey League said Tuesday they have signed goalie Mario Lessard to a multi-year contract. The rookie, who has posted a 2.67 goals-against average and a 3-2-1 record in six games this season, was originally a ninth-round draft pick by the Kings in the 1974 amateur draft.

Lessard, 24, became the first rookie goalie in six years to register a shutout in his first NHL game when he blanked Buffalo Sabres 6-0 a month ago. The Kings also signed goaltender Lorne Molleken to a multi-year contract. He was assigned him to their American Hockey League team in Springfield.

TRANS-ATLANTIC SAILING VICTORY BY FOUR MINUTES

In the race that started from Saint Malo, France, on Nov. 5, Birch beat Frenchman Michel Malinovsky by four minutes.

In all, it took Birch 23 days and seven hours to cross the Atlantic, a feat he performs single-handed several times each year.

His victory in the Rhoute du Rhum was uncertain up to a point two kilometres from the finish. It was then that he passed Malinovsky and coasted home.

Birch, who was born in Vancouver, now lives in Dartmouth on the south coast of England.

Ali Offered Coetzee Bout

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Muhammad Ali has been offered $5.8 million by a South African syndicate to defend his World Boxing Association heavyweight title against Gerrie Coetzee in Japan next year, the South African Press Association says.

The offer has been confirmed by Coetzee's manager, Hal Tucker, who heads the syndicate which made the offer originally to Ali's manager, Herbert Muhammed, immediately after Ali had regained the world title in September.

"We were told that he was definitely interested in the prospect but would not make a decision until late December or early January," Tucker said.

The Ali camp made it clear then the champion would not consider fighting in South Africa.

But Tucker, after receiving Herbert Muhammed's statement that he was definitely interested in a fight with Coetzee, called on NBC television Sports Director Dick Araback in New York and was advised by him to try and arrange a fight in Tokyo featuring Ali and Coetzee.

'Freedom of Speech'

first time Chinese have started calling.

They are mostly just curious, while some simply want to practise their English, but possession of the number has excited many people. They now have one for every correspondent in town.

As far as anyone has been able to determine, the Hsi Tan spirit has so far not registered in other Chinese cities, although word was getting around as early as a week ago. However, with the official approval given by Teng Tuesday, this situation is expected to change.

His words undoubtedly were responsible for the increased size of the crowd Tuesday night. It was an amazing statement in many ways, not just for its approval of people speaking out.

Teng, in one of the most deft political tricks ever attempted here recently, has come out as a defender of the late Chairman Mao Tse-tung — nifty work when you consider Teng was the man largely responsible for the current campaign to re-evaluate the late chairman's role.

Without better organization, the Hsi Tan democracy get-togethers will inevitably peter out, although they will almost certainly go on for several more days, sustained by the sheer euophoria of it all. It is important to note, also, that despite some of the severe criticism being registered about current conditions in China, most of what is being said falls into a category that might fairly be described as "loyal dissent."

These young people believe that socialist democracy, in some important form, can be achieved under the Communist government, and they do not argue with the basic thrust of the country's direction, it is the details that irk them so much.

It still remains to be seen whether or not they can find a way to settle those grievance.

Topsoil Sale Charge Laid

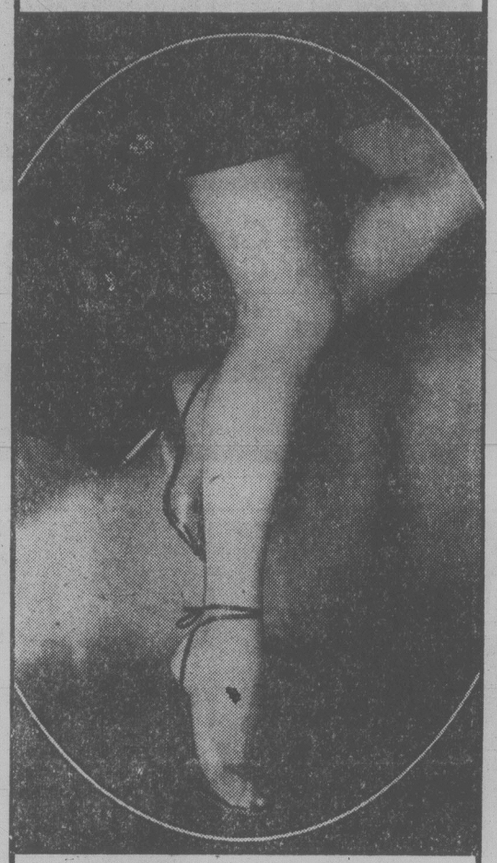

A Saanich resident will appear in provincial court Friday charged with selling topsoil from her property in contravention of the municipality's recently-enacted soil removal bylaw.

The charge against Mary Reinstein, 1345 Mount Douglas Cross Road, follows an investigation by officials in response to complaints from the Saanich Greenbelt Association.

The association claims that Oak Bay municipality was among the customers for the topsoil.

Newman's Messiah Out There Somewhere

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

And Newman himself, during a brief Victoria visit to promote his latest book — Bronfman Dynasty: The Rothschilds of the New World — concedes there's some truth in both descriptions.

"I don't think I need a Messiah but I am always looking for one," said Newman.

"I believe very strongly in this country and I keep hoping we will come up with a leader who is going to be able to unite Canada, lead it and exploit its full potential.

"I am becoming less sure that it's possible, but I haven't given up hope."

A recent editorial by Newman in Maclean's may have been interpreted by some as an indication that he believes John Turner should be the anointed one, but Newman said he wasn't necessarily advocating Turner be the next prime minister of Canada.

"One advantage he (Turner) does have over all candidates is that he is the only one with a strong power base in both French and English Canada.

"He has this incredible collage of constituencies whereby he grew up in Ottawa, received his university education in B.C., practised law in Quebec, was in government in Ottawa and now lives in Toronto."

Newman believes it would be tragic if Canadians next year — the year of the Quebec referendum — elect a government without a strong Quebec representation.

As for that "power groupie" appellation, he shudders slightly at the choice of language but doesn't attempt to argue the basic point.

"There are different ways to study a society and the one that has always interested me is to study those who hold power, to see how they acquired it, how it is exercised and how it is abused."

Newman's latest book is not, as he explains in the preface, the one he started out to write three years ago.

In researching material for the second volume of The Canadian Establishment, particularly on the aspect of Jewish power, he found the various branches of the Bronfman clan figured so largely that the story deserved special treatment in a volume by itself.

The book traces the family's extraordinary rise to wealth — Newman estimates they control assets worth $7 billion — in one generation. Some of its most readable chapters are those describing entrepreneur Samuel Bronfman explosive personality and the way he built the foundations of the family's fortune on bootleg whisky.

Newman says it was more difficult to research the Bronfman story than any other he has written because, unlike politicians, the family has always existed and operated its commercial empire away from public scrutiny.

"The luxury they bought with their money is privacy and I invaded that privacy, although I don't think I violated it."

NEWMAN says he'll now return to the main theme of those who wield power in the Canadian Establishment, including the press establishment and the legal establishment.

Meanwhile, as editor of Maclean's he says he's generally pleased with the magazine's recent switch to weekly publication.

There are some gaps and deficiencies which still have to be corrected, including the problem of hitting on a successful visual format ("sometimes it's too crowded") and he has plans to expand world coverage.

"There's a long way to go to make it a great magazine but I think we have proven that it is possible to put out a weekly news magazine in Canada," he said.

"People should not compare us with Time and Newsweek as they are today, but as those magazines were several years ago."

Chamber Called 'Spoiled Child' On Air Service

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

Young called the organization "bullheaded . . . a spoiled child" for its stand on transportation and harbor development.

The mayor, who had been criticized by the chamber for favoring a Victoria-Vancouver airbus service instead of helicopters, replied:

"The difference between the chamber and me on this issue is I have been approaching it with an open mind and a closed mouth while the chamber has had a closed mind and an open mouth."

Young said there are good reasons for considering an airbus service but the chamber won't listen, he said.

"Instead, all they can say is 'helicopters! helicopters!' like a spoiled child wanting a new toy."

Young said the airbus idea could turn out to be superior and the chamber should at least give it a fair try.

The mayor and chamber also clashed on whether there should be industry or hotel-residential accommodation in the west harbor region on the Songhees reserve where the tank farm is.

Incoming chamber president Mel Cooper and executive vice-president Cedric Steele said the mayor was wrong for advocating the area be turned into apartments and said he should consider light industries instead.

"Light industry is not the best long-term use of that property," Young said.

"But we are at least prepared to discuss the issue. The chamber is approaching this in its usual bullheaded way."

The chamber is pushing for downtown-to-downtown helicopter service that could have Victorians in Vancouver within 30 minutes, night or day.

Young favors an airbus service in which a bus would leave downtown Victoria and drive right to the steps of a plane at Pat Bay airport and luggage would be carried aboard by the passengers.

At Vancouver airport, another bus would be waiting to take them downtown. Total travel time would be about 90 minutes.

— It is something that could be done now. A helicopter service would be 18 months to two years away even if approval was given within the next few weeks.

— The airbus would make use of existing facilities at Pat Bay airport and the increased traffic would justify expansion of traffic control devices.

— It would complement existing air service between Victoria and Vancouver and there would be many more flights during the day.

Young said Victoria-bound passengers arriving in Vancouver from Toronto or London or Paris often have to wait several hours before getting a connection to the Island.

Meanwhile, the helicopter service would be costly. It would require purchase of a site for the Victoria landing field and the purchase or lease of land in downtown Vancouver.

In addition, land would have to be purchased in the area around the landing field because it would no longer be suitable for residential use.

Further, expensive terminal facilities and helicopter control systems would have to be installed.

And there would be a constant danger because the helicopters would be flying over the downtown area of the two cities.

Young said he is prepared to discuss the helicopter idea further but the chamber should be prepared to take a look at the airbus proposal and give it a try.

There was more chance of agreeing on development on the west side of the harbor, the mayor said, provided the chamber is prepared to keep an open mind.

Young said he favors a mix of hotel-commercial-residential use. This assumed the tank farms would be phased out. If the oil tanks remain, then obviously, some light industry could be considered nearby.

In the long run, he said, the best use of the valuable harbor area would be for mainly hotel-commercial use.

City council once had proposed apartment development on the site but that idea came forward in 1975 and hasn't been proposed since, Young said.

SOOKE STUDENT DRUNK AT SCHOOL

Special Class for Trouble-Makers

A small group of teen-aged trouble-makers disrupting Sooke classrooms will be rounded up in January and placed in a special program.

School board chairman Horst Doniecki said today about a dozen repeatedly disruptive 13 and 14 year-olds will be taken out of the system and placed in an alternative program.

And parents will be expected to help control them.

Doniecki said although the board doesn't know yet how parents will be involved, they must assume at least part of the responsibility for children with severe social problems.

The problem teen-agers have a history of wild behavior which ranges from belligerence to violence, he said.

There has been one reported incident of drunkenness in the classroom.

Doniecki said the board was shocked when school superintendent Brian Johnson reported at a meeting Tuesday night that the problem is serious.

"We hadn't realized it had reached the extent that the regular classroom teacher just couldn't cope."

He said the troublemakers realize teachers have little power and take advantage of the situation.

Suspensions are just three or four-day holidays and then they are back disrupting classes again, Doniecki said.

He said the new class will be in Dunsmuir school.

Disruptive students will be taken from various schools in the district and placed together in the classroom where a different approach will be taken.

Meanwhile, Greater Victoria school board chairman Susan Brice has rejected a suggestion that schools teach proper drinking habits to teen-agers.

Brice said today a suggestion by a Canadian expert on addictive behavior that children be taught in school how to handle alcohol would probably create more problems.

Dr. Alan Marlatt, a psychology professor at Washington University, recommended in Victoria recently that alcohol and possibly drug counselling should be available in schools.

But Brice said when the district introduced a drug abuse program about 10 years ago, student interest in drugs increased.

"I would rather children pick up a general attitude of responsible behavior from school in every aspect of their lifestyle," she said.

. . . parents must help

It's unrealistic for people to expect schools to handle sensitive social problems such as alcohol and drug abuse.

"A lot of well-meaning people feel schools should teach these type of things, but schools are not equipped to handle them. It could do more damage than good."

Brice said teachers have their hands full with the academic requirements that are the education system's first priority.

GIFFORD
. . . new act worse

Do you understand all the ramifications of B.C.'s proposed new Family and Child Services Act?

Probably not, and neither did I.

That's because most people believe it just applies to child abuse and couldn't possibly have anything to do with them.

"The real problem is convincing people that it can affect the lives of almost every child and every family in the province," Jocelyn Gifford, a member of the faculty of UVic's school of social work, told me the other day when I dropped into the Law Centre.

As well as the treatment of normal children, the welfare of handicapped and children with learning disabilities comes under a province's Family and Child Services Act.

"But it also allows, if a child is left unattended because of some emergency or because a child is left after school when a single parent works, for the government to take that child temporarily away from its parents' care," Jocelyn explained. "So it really does have the potential to touch each family."

Because of this and because Gifford believes the proposed new act is worse in many respects than the old one drawn up in 1901, she is urging as many as possible to take in the public forum Focus on Family Thursday night at 8 at the Newcombe Auditorium in the Provincial Museum.

Dr. Hugh Keenleyside will be moderator for the forum, which will feature a presenting panel headed by a government spokesman and a responding panel, and will allow for questions and a general discussion.

"Human Resources Minister Vander Zalm has said he wants all public comment and suggestions in by Dec. 31 and the government hopes to push the act through in the spring," Gifford said.

Copies of the proposed act can be obtained from the Queen's Printers or from the Law Centre at 510 Fort. A booklet will also be handed out at the forum, which will be videotaped and broadcast on Channel 10 on Dec. 14.

Sponsored by the Law Centre and the B.C. Council for the Family, the forum is free.

"Organizers of the forum don't want me to be too negative," Gifford said with a grin, "but I'm not happy at all with the proposed new act.

"There has been a terrific amount of work done in the area of family law by Vic Belknap, superintendent for child welfare here for 10 years, who spent a year doing research that has been pushed aside.

"Similar acts passed in Quebec (1977) and Ontario (1978) have some exciting things in them. Like children have the right to live in their own families where at all possible; or to live a life as normal as possible if they can't live in their own families.

"They have a right to communicate with their parents; they have a right to a lawyer and a social worker, all in confidence, which they don't have here.

"In these other provinces the court must give the child an opportunity to be heard in any case dealing with the custody of the child. Even under our new act, a child here can be up to 17 years old but still have no say in a case deciding his or her future!

"Under the new act here a child is still treated as a chattel and has fewer rights than in other provices, yet our government doesn't seem to want to use the good work that has been done elsewhere as a guideline. And it's simply good economics to do this."

When you get into the realm of care for the handicapped child or the child with severe learning disabilities, the new act seems even more frightening.

"This government's proposal puts the whole responsibility on parents to take care of their children and largely this means that parents will pay for the control of their kids," Gifford pointed out.

"The whole focus of this act is on the parents having the responsibility and it doesn't say a word about the government having any responsibility at all. And I think all parents should be concerned about this.

"Hopefully, this is something that the government hasn't considered enough and will change if there's enough pressure from parents . . . parents who say they are willing to be responsible but need a little help from the government, especially in times when money is tight and the going gets tough."

Cooking: Is Longer Better?

By PIERRE FRANEY
New York Times

It is a fact of cooking that some dishes equally palatable may vary vastly in the amount of time required to produce them. And, psychologically, one dish may be much more admired for the simple reason that it required more effort and know-how than did another.

One case in point is an omelet, which must be made in seconds, and a well-made souffle, which often requires a custard base, the folding in of well-beaten eggs, and carefully tended baking. It has often been argued that if a souffle and an omelet could be made in the same brief time, most people would prefer the omelet. (Certain omelets do take longer to produce — the omelet paysanne with potatoes, for example, must actually bake in the skillet.)

It is true that the dish sounds like a fantasy, but the proof is in the sampling. People with sophisticated palates have dined with gusto on this dish, and they were unstinting in their praise for the "secrets" involved. So this is the secret: You smear a bit of mayonnaise containing a little additional mustard and chopped herbs on top of a fish fillet, run it under a broiler briefly, and serve it.

The fact is, once the mayonnaise is made you will need more time to prepare the side dishes — spinach, for example, plus parsley potatoes — than to make the main event. The total broiling time for the fish is about one minute for small fillets, slightly more for the larger sizes.

BROILED FLOUNDER-FILWITH MUSTARD

8 Small, skinless, boneless flounder fillets, about one pound Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 Tablespoon peanut, vegetable or corn oil
2 Tablespoons mayonnaise, preferably fresh, although bottled mayonnaise may be used
1 Tablespoon imported mustard such as Dijon or Dusseldorf
2 Teaspoons finely chopped pardley
4 Lemon or lime wedges

1. Preheat the broiler to high.

2. Place the fillets on a flat surface. Sprinkle with salt and pepper and brush with oil.

3. Arrange the fillets on a banking sheet or dish. Blend the mayonnaise, mustard and parsley. Brush it evenly over the fillets.

4. Place the fillets under the broiler, about three or four inches from the source of heat. Broil about one minute or until golden brown on top and the fish is just cooked through. Serve with lemon wedges.

Yield: 4 servings.

SAUTEED LEAF SPINACH

1½ Pounds fresh spinach in bulk or two 10-ounce packages in plastic bags
3 Tablespoons butter
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
1 Clove garlic, peeled

1. If necessary, pick over the spinach to remove and discard all very tough stems and blemished leaves.

2. Drop the leaves into boiling water to cover and cook about one minute. Drain well. When cool enough to handle, squeeze between the hands to extract most of the excess liquid.

3. Place the spinach on a flat surface and chop coarsely.

4. Heat two tablespoons of the butter in a heavy skillet and add the spinach. Add salt and pepper to taste. Cook briefly and flatten the spinach inside the skillet by pressing down with a spatula. It should resemble a pancake. Run remaining one tablespoon of the butter arounf the rim of the spinach letting it seep under. Let brown lightly on one side.

5. Spear the garlic with a two-pronged fork. Lift the spinach at various laces and rub the garlic around the bottom of the skillet. Discard the garlic. Cook until spinach starts to brown. Cook about two minutes longer. Total cooking time is about seven minutes.

Yield: 4 servings.

Cranberry Pie Proves a Useful Dish All Winter

Cranberries come into our local markets just in time to think of interesting ways to use them during the holiday season. Their bright, red color needs no artificial stimulus to maintain their attraction. When cooked, the color is even brighter.

To counteract the tartness, use a quarter teaspoon of dried angelica and some lemon or orange juice in place of high quantities of sugar.

Sugar, as most of us have learned by now, increases the acid reaction of fruits when they are cooked. Cranberries are themselves alkaline in their reaction, according to a listing on hand.

Cranberry Pie makes a fine lunch or supper dessert to have on hand during the winter months. There will be valuable minerals in the fruits as well as vitamins A and C, and the pastry itself also contributes many nutrients. All this makes a serving of Cranberry Pie a useful part of a meal.

CRANBERRY PIE

Single Crust and Top Strips:
- ¾ cup whole wheat flour
- ¾ cup unbleached flour
- 1 tsp. salt
- 6 tbsps. cold soft margarine
- ⅓ cup (approx.) cold water

Filling:
- ¾ cup brown sugar
- 2 tbsps. corn starch
- ½ tsp. salt
- ½ tsp. dry angelica leaf
- ½ cup orange juice
- 1 tbsp. lemon juice
- 1 tbsp. soft margarine softened
- 1 cup chopped apple
- 1 cup cranberries coarse chopped

Pastry can be made a day or two ahead to chill in refrigerator. Measure flour and salt into mixing bowl. Cut in cold margarine until crumbly. Add cold water in drops to form a ball of dough. Mould with hands at the end to take in remaining crumbs. Wrap closely in waxed paper, chill in refrigerator at least one hour or longer to suit your schedule.

When making pie, roll out pastry to line a nine or 10-inch pie plate, keeping a piece to make four narrow strips crossed on top. Turn overhanging pieces under to build up edge a little.

Cranberry Filling:

Wash cranberries and grind in hand grinder. Peel and grind apples. Do this last.

Into bowl put all ingredients, adding the ground fruits last so they are quickly coated with margarine and juices to prevent loss of vitamins and minerals. Put mixture into unbaked pie shell.

Bake in hot oven 219 deg. C for 15 minutes, reduce to moderate 177 deg. C for about 20 minutes longer or until lightly browned. Do not overcook.

Serve warm or cold with heaping tablespoon of homemade yogurt on each portion. Serves about 6.

Cranberry Pie Filling No. 2 (for single crust):
- 1 cup whole cranberries
- ½ cup raisins, cut into pieces
- ¼ cup sugar
- ¼ tsp. dry angelica leaf
- 2 tbsps. lemon juice
- 1 cup water
- 1 tbsp. (heaping) cornstarch
- 1 tbsp. soft margarine

Bring to boil all ingredients except margarine; simmer for 15 minutes until thickened, stirring to prevent scorching.

Bake in moderate oven 177 deg. C for about 30 minutes.

Serve with homemade plain yogurt; 6 portions, or more smaller.

Cranberries make a very pleasant and nutritious preserve, too, when combined with a few raisins and ground nuts, peanuts, or others. But first reduce acidity by covering the berries with boiling water for 5 minutes. Drain and discard liquid.

CRANBERRY PRESERVE
- 2 cups prepared cranberries as above
- 1 cup fresh cold water
- ¼ cup sugar
- ¼ tsp. powdered angelica leaf
- ¼ cup chopped raisins
- ¼ cup ground peanuts
- 2 tbsps. frozen orange concentrate

Boil prepared cranberries in water until quite soft, about 10 minutes.

Add sugar and angelica and bring to boil again. Stir in raisins and nuts; cool gently for 10 minutes or until thickened. Add orange juice. Pour into glass jar; when cool, put on lid and keep in refrigerator to use in next few weeks.

Apart from its lovely color, this Cranberry Preserve will be a great change from the oversweet commercial jams to go on toast, or an alternative to sweet pickles for green salads and omelets, or with homemade plain yogurt on pancakes, and even on toasted cheese sandwiches. it adds a festive touch to a good plain meal.

Cranberry Jelly started out as an eastern U.S. Thanksgiving specialty made from the wild cranberry of the surrounding country. Soon it travelled over the border to eastern Canada.

The clear jelly is another decorative dish to make for holiday fare, or for any time during winter from frozen berries. Turned out on a yellow or pale green dish, it is always popular on the party table.

CRANBERRY JELLY
- 2 cups cranberries
- ½ cup cold water
- ¼ cup sugar

First steep the berries in boiling water for 5 minutes as in above recipes. Drain and discard liquid.

Add the ½ cup cold fresh water and simmer about 20 minutes until all berries have popped. Rub through a wire sieve to remove skins and seeds.

Add sugar; return to boil and simmer 5 minutes until thickening.

Pour into wet mould or basin. Refrigerate for 24 hours to set.

The skins strained out are used on a green salad or on morning granola with yogurt so there is no waste.

When Cranberries come to local markets it pays to buy a few pounds at the best available price. They freeze well and can be kept in the top of the refrigerator freezer for a few weeks, and quickly cooked up into various treats for the winter season, using much less sugar than you might think necessary. And you still have the natural bright red color in the pies, the preserve and the jelly.

For dessert-loving traditionalists, the Christmas pudding is a glamorous annual ritual, especially when the fragrant, steamed mold is brought flaming from the kitchen, topped with a sprig of holly.

Traditionally, at Christmas pudding-making time, every member of the houehold would stir the mixture for luck. Sometimes, good luck charms were added to the batter — small silver bachelor buttons, spinster's thimbles, rich man's coins, poor man's beans — like the surprises we put in birthday cakes. Perhaps this is where that custom began.

Making a steamed pudding is quite easy. If you don't have a steamer you can always improvise. A deep kettle with a tight fitting lid will do the job. You'll need a rack or trivet on which to set the mold.

Like making fruitcakes, the time-consuming chore is preparing the fruit and nuts. However, today these can usually be purchased chopped in the size required, so the cutting-chopping job has been cut to a minimum. Meatmen will supply suet and grind it. You may even find it at this time of year, as I did, prepackaged. Use your largest bowl to combine ingredients.

A rich, full-bodied flavor develops if Christmas puddings are stored for one to two months before eating. Make them now, so they'll be ready and fully developed for your festive week. They will keep, covered, in a dry place. Refrigeration, however, is not necessary.

PLUM PUDDING
Makes 12 Servings

½ cup raisins
½ cup currants
⅓ cup brandy
3 cups all-purpose flour
1½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon each of ground ginger, cloves and nutmeg
½ cup chopped nuts
½ cup chopped candied peel
1 apple, grated
1 cup suet
1½ cups milk
Brandy for flaming Hard Sauce

Soak raisins and currants overnight in ⅓ cup brandy. Mix dry ingredients together; add the soaked currants and raisins and any liquid remaining. Mix in nuts, peel and apple. Stir in suet, milk and molasses. Pour into 2 buttered 4-cup bowls or molds or one 8-cup bowl or mold. Cover tightly with a lid or double thickness of foil or waxed paper. (Butter one side of foil or paper. Make a 1-inch pleat across centre to allow for expansion, then place buttered side down, over mold.) Secure in place with string.

Place mold on rack or trivet in large kettle. Pour enough boiling water in kettle so water comes halfway up the side of the mold. Cover kettle. Steam for 3 hours, making sure the water boils all the time. Add more boiling water if needed to keep the water level constant. Remove mold from water and cool. Remove the foil or waxed paper, replace with fresh foil or waxed paper.

Store, covered, in a dry place for 1 to 2 months so pudding matures and rich flavor of the fruit develops. When ready to serve at Christmas, steam pudding 1 to 1½ hours longer. Unmold onto a heat-proof serving plate. To flame pudding, warm about ½ cup brandy in ladle, then flame; pour over pudding and serve with Brandy Hard Sauce.

BRANDY HARD SAUCE
Makes 2 cups

1 cup botter
2 cups sifted icing sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
¼ cup brandy

STEAMED CRANBERRY PUDDING
Makes 12 servings

Softened butter or margarine
Granulated sugar
4 cups (1 pound) cranberries
1 cup seedless raisins
½ cup candied peel
3 cups all-purpose flour
3 teaspoons baking soda
1 cup molasses
¾ cup hot water

Brush an 8-cup mold generously with butter or margarine. Sprinkle surface with granulated sugar. Rotate mold to coat it completely with sugar. Turn mold over and shake out excess sugar. Chop cranberries coarsely with a knife or using the coarse blade, put them through the food chopper or chop for a few seconds in a food processor. Place in a large bowl. Add raisins and candied peel. Mix together well.

Mix flour and baking soda. Pour over the mixed fruit and mix well. Blend molasses and hot water. Stir into the fruit-flour mixture until thoroughly mixed. Pour into prepared mold. Cover tightly with a lid. If mold does not have a cover of its own, use a double thickness of foil or waxed paper. (Butter one side of foil or waxed paper, then place buttered side down on mold.) Secure in place with string. Place mold on rack or trivet in large kettle. Pour enough boiling water in kettle so water comes halfway up the side of the mold. Cover kettle. Steam for 1½ hous making sure water boils all the time. Add more boiling water if needed to keep the water level constant. Remove mold from water and let stand 15 minutes. Unmold onto serving plate. Serve with Vanilla Sauce.

VANILLA SAUCE
Makes 2 cups

½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
2 cups water
¼ cup butter
2 tablespoons vanilla
⅛ teaspoon salt

Combine sugar, cornstarch and water in a heavy-bottomed saucepan. Cook, stir ring constantly, over medium heat until thickened. Remove from heat then stir in butter, vanilla and salt.

Timely tibs: Slices of left-over Christmas pudding are delicious fried in butter until very hot then sprinkled with icing sugar and served with vanilla or hard sauce . . . Freeze leftover pudding, then to serve cut it in very thin slices and top it with vanilla ice cream and any fruit sauce.

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: I am a young married woman. During a job interview today I was asked, "Do you plan to start a family in the near future?"

I was flabbergasted. I never dreamed that such an inquiry would be made in this day of equal rights, working women, postponed parenthood, etc.

Abby, my husband and I are a family. And besides, I invested a great deal of time and effort in earning a college degree and, right now, my career is of paramount importance to me.

I am certain that a male applicant would not have been asked a question like that. In your opinion, is that a proper question to ask a female applicant? Or am I getting all shook up about a legitimate request for information? K

DEAR K: When a new employee is hired, the employer makes an investment in time and training. He therefore has a right to know if the applicant plans to have a family or not — and if so, when.

Some women take a leave of absence from their jobs to have children and raise them. Men do not.

DEAR ABBY: No names please. If anyone knew I wrote this I'd die of embarrassment.

What is the difference between a mule, a donkey and a jackass?

I have heard that mules are sterile. So if a mule can't reproduce how come we still have mules? Thank you.
OLD ENOUGH TO KNOW BETTER

DEAR OLD ENOUGH: A mule is the offspring of a jackass and a mare. When a male horse mates with a female donkey, the offspring is known as a "hinny." A hinny is capable of reproducing, but the mule is almost always sterile.

Sound Diet the Best Bet

eating right

By Ruth Fremes
and Zak Sabry

DEAR RUTH AND ZAK:

I have a friend who takes vitamin and mineral tablets on a daily basis. In particular, she takes a multi-vitamin and mineral tablet, a B-complex tablet, vitamin E and extra vitamin C. She claims that the additional vitamins make her a healthier and happier person.

I have also heard it said that if you take three square meals a day, you do not need any additional vitamins. I happen to take three normal meals a day, although I have never examined the content of these meals for nutritional value.

I am wondering which of us, my friend or me, is right.

W.A.P.—Victoria

DEAR W.A.P.:

It is true that if you have a balanced diet, you will not need any supplements. Anyone with good eating habits, eating no fewer than three normal meals (there's nothing holy about the number three), should be getting all the vitamins and minerals in the diet. However, it is important to examine your diet and to evaluate its nutritional adequacy. You can do that with the NutriScore chart (to be found in chapter 2 of the book Nutriscore which we authored and was published by Methuen or by comparing your diet against Canada's Food Guide (to be obtained from the nutritionist in your local health unit.

Your friend appears to be taking too much of certain vitamins. In spite of all the tablets she is taking, it is possible that her diet is low in a certain vitamin or mineral, which might also be absent from all the preparations she is taking.

It is wise to take a sensible approach to the whole question of vitamin and mineral supplements and let us emphasize minerals — often they are ignored when they shouldn't. Yet, nutrition surveys in Canada and in the United States have shown that more people are likely to be low in iron and possibly other minerals than in any vitamin. So, if we think of supplements, we should think in terms of vitamins and minerals.

We should all appreciate the amounts needed by any one of us if all the vitamins and most of the minerals are so small that they fit conveniently into a small tablet, with plenty of room for a filler to make it easy to swallow or to chew. With our society's fondness of pills, many people are easily convinced that if some were good, more were better. This misconception has given rise to the various "mega-vitamin" theories and therapies.

There are situations that demand more-than-usual of certain vitamins and minerals. Women in the child-bearing age do have higher needs for iron than those past the menopause. Women on oral contraceptives have been shown to benefit from supplements of some of the B vitamins. Pregnant women and nursing mothers have higher needs than other women of almost all vitamins and minerals. These more-than-usual amounts could be found in carefully planned diets. Anyone knowledgeable in nutrition could cultivate the necessary good eating habits to get all they need from food. The amounts needed are but a small fraction of those needed by everyone else. It is no basis for falling victim to the "mega-vitamin" theories.

By far, the majority of people looking for a vitamin-and-mineral supplement are seeking it as insurance against possible bad eating habits. The preparation they need should provide all the vitamins and most (we don't know them all) of the minerals, in amounts at or slightly below the recommended levels of intake. If the preparation provides even a third or a half of the recommended intake, it should be acceptable. After all, it is reasonable to assume that no diet could be so bad that it is completely deficient in a vitamin or a mineral. It is smart to pick the cheapest of several preparations for as long as they meet the desirable formulations. You could pick up a good buy on a preparation that has passed the expiry date; the rate of deterioration of most vitamins is relatively slow so as to make them excellent bargains.

To help you identify the right preparation of a supplement, we will list here the recommended level of intakes as given in the Canadian Dietary Standard for an adult; whenever the level is different for men and women, we'll list the higher one:

Vitamin A	(1,000 mcg)
Vitamin D	(2.5 mcg)
Vitamin E	(9 mg)
Vitamin C	(30 mg)
Vitamin (B1)	(1.5 mg)
Riboflavin	(1.8 mg)
Niacin (B3)	(20 mg)
Pyridoxine (B6)	(2 mg)
Folic acid	(200 mcg)
Vitamin B12	(3 mcg)
Iron	(14 mg)
Magnesium	(300 mg)
Zinc	(10 mg)

The important point to remember is that while a vitamin-mineral supplement may be of value, it is no substitute for a balanced diet. At this point in time, there is a great deal that we don't know about the amounts of many trace minerals needed by the body. Ultimately, these have to come from food. Only a balanced diet will guarantee you the nutrients your body needs.

We read about studies of the eating habits of students in six secondary schools in the South Okanagan. In one school, where the students ran their own sales concession, they sold 2,389 items of sweets and chocolate bars per 1,000 students per month. When they offered apples, as well as chocolate bars in the vending machines, the chocolate bar sales fell to 1,677 and the sale of apples reached 5,763 per 1,000 students per month. This is an impressive record. Think how many apples they might have sold if the chocolate bars were taken out completely. What's more, the students made more profit on the apples than they did on the chocolate bars.

(Dr. Z. I. Sabry is a professor of nutrition at the University of Guelph. Ruth Fremes is a home economist, radio and television commentator, and with Dr. Sabry wrote NutriScore published by Methuen Publications.)

Forest Service Flaunts New Act: Sierra Club

The battle to prevent logging of the Akamina-Kishinena Valley in southeast B.C. has taken a new twist with the Sierra Club accusing the forest service of violating the new Forest Act.

In a letter to Forest Minister Tom Waterland, the club said the decision to allow logging in the valley violates the act's provisions regarding integrated planning, consultation with other gov ernment departments and the private sector.

The club, supported by Parks Canada and the U.S. National park department, wants the valley made into a provincial park as it adjoins Waterton Park in Alberta and Glazier Nationl Park in Montana.

An alternative is to protect certain key areas in the valley.

Logging the valley will result in serious deterioration of the two national parks, Canadian and U.S. park experts say.

Sierra spokesman Bob Nixon said the club wants the forest service to prepare a comprehensive plan for the valley which fully recognizes the need to protect the adjacent national parks.

Booze, Bench Poor Mix: Gardom

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said Tuesday he does not like the idea of having an alcoholic judge on the bench.

Gardom, on his return from Ottawa, refused further comment on the case of Judge Erik Bendrodt until after it is discussed by cabinet next week.

"In a general sense I don't think it appropriate that an alcoholic be sitting on the bench," said Gardom. "I think that is unsatisfactory."

Bendrodt was the subject of an inquiry by the Judicial Council of B.C. earlier this month, during which he admitted to being an alcoholic and to having picked up a teen-aged prostitute.

The council said the judge's actions were regrettable, but questioned whether he should be removed from the bench for a single moral lapse, and recommended that no further action be taken.

Gardom said legislation giving the judicial council the final say on disciplining a judge will be studied and may be changed during the next session of the legislature.

The attorney-general also said he is not planning any action on the recent fatal accident in Delta, which occurred during a high-speed police chase.

He said police are expected to follow policy on car chases, and that policy is to get the suspect in the safest way possible.

"There is a policy, and human error I suppose came into being. I've yet to find man or woman perfect.

"If there are deficiencies in the policy, they certainly have to be attended to, and quickly," he added.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Development Corp. announced Tuesday it will hold a design competition among B.C. consultants for the deep-sea dock and related cargo assembly areas at Duke Point near Nanaimo.

Corporation president D. A. Duguid said in a press release the engineering contract should be awarded by early January, 1979.

The shipping facility, which will cost more than $30 million, is designed to service Vancouver Island and new industries locating at the 400-acre Duke Point industrial development.

Duguid said that corporation's wholly-owned subsidiary, Duke Point Terminals Co. Ltd., will also proceed immediately with the design and construction of a 20-acre petroleum bulk terminal to accommodate companies relocating from Victoria and Nanaimo inner harbors.

The provincial government will guarantee the financing for the dock and assembly area which will be leased or sold to private operators. The oil terminal will be similarly financed and operated.

Duguid said the corporation's board of directors have approved the formation of Duke Point Power Cooperative Co. to provide electrical power needs for industries locating at Duke Point.

Engineering studies have begun to evaluate various methods of generation for maximum energy conservation, Duguid said.

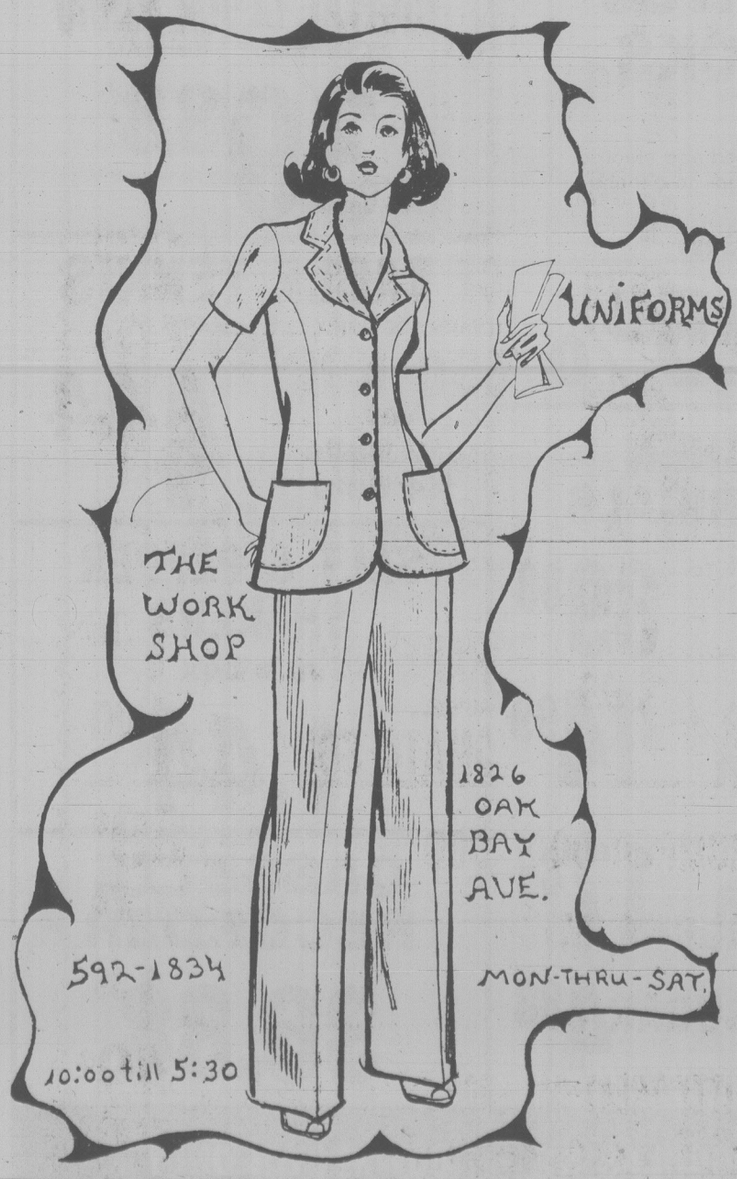

Tenders for the major earthwork contract for the Duke Point development are expected in about two weeks and contracts will be awarded before Christmas.

Engineering is under way for the city water and sewer systems to serve Duke Point with construcion scheduled to begin in early 1979. The first major industry to locate at Duke Point is expected to begin construction in April, 1979.

The corporation began planning the Duke Point development in 1977 to fulfil requests made by the city of Nanaimo and the Nanaimo Harbors Board for new industry and a modern sea dock facility.

McGeer Mulls Key-Service Move To Nip School Strike

NELSON (CP) — Education Minister Pat McGeer says he is considering asking the provincial cabinet to have schools in the West Kootenays declared an essential service if a month-old strike-lockout is not settled within a couple of weeks.

Bus drivers and clerical and maintenance staff, represented by the Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE), went on strike Oct. 26 in the Nelson school district and at Selkirk College in nearby Castlegar. The same day CUPE employees at Grand Forks, Trail and Castlegar school districts were locked out.

Representatives from CUPE and the British Columbia School Trustees Association (BCSTA) will meet separately here today with mediator Clark Gilmour.

Schools have remained open during the dispute, but have been operating on reduced schedules, mainly because of a lack of heating. CUPE members affected by the dispute maintain and operate boilers in the schools.

Earlier this week, two secondary schools in Trail and another in Castlegar were closed for one day after CUPE increased its picket action and teachers refused to cross the line.

"I think it's just terrible and disgraceful the way our children are being used as pawns in these disputes," McGeer said. "As far as I'm concerned, education is so important the schools should never be closed by anybody under any circumstances."

McGeer said he hasn't yet recommended to cabinet that the schools be declared an essential service, "but I'm going to be doing that if it (the dispute) goes on much longer."

The main stumbling blocks in the dispute are wages and the union's desire to retain separate contracts with each school district.

However, the BCSTA is negotiating jointly for the boards, a move that Fred Pyke, CUPE national representative, has called a "curse in these negotiations."

Pyke said the union, which represents about 250 workers in the district, wants wage parity with CUPE workers at Okanagan schools, but doesn't want to be tied into a master contract as it has been in previous years.

Meanwhile, Cliff Read, president of the Trail District Teachers' Association, said Tuesday the students' education is suffering because of the dispute.

ENROLMENT-DROP GRANTS STUDIED

Enrolment in B.C.schools is declining and concerned officials have established a study committee which is expected to recommend a declining-enrolment grant for school districts penalized by the current finance formula.

The education ministry reports enrolment in B.C. schools in September was 517,767, down from 527,771 in September, 1977

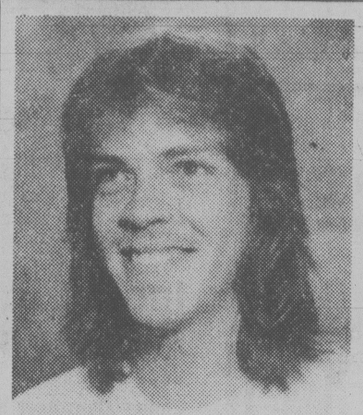

Ken Plant, director of educational data services, says some districts have increased because of movements in population but the overall effect was a drop.

An education ministry official said some districts are in trouble because the financing formula is based on enrolment and the number of schools in a district. Some districts have calculated that the money they lose in provincial grants when a school is closed may exceed money saved in operating costs.

John Walsh, program superintendent for the education ministry, said the committee, made up of school trustees, teachers and ministry and school district staff may suggest in a report, due in January, a declining-enrolment grant for school districts.

Gas Pipeline To Be Moved From River

TERRACE (CP) — Pacific Northern Gas Ltd. has decided to relocate a 7.2-kilometre stretch of natural gas pipeline away from the Copper River about 40 kilometres east of here, a company spokesman said Tuesday.

Ray Parfitt, an environmentalist with Pacific Northern, said the cost of moving the section of the line, which runs between here and Prince George, could be as much as $2 million.

The pipeline, which broke in two places during the serious flooding earlier this month, is to be moved up the hillside away from the Copper River before severe winter weather threatens the line.

Extradition Order

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Cupreme Court ordered Tuesday that a Chilean arrested here in September to be extradited to Australia to face charges in an international fraudulent chequing conspiracy.

The court rejected Fernando Foucat-Concha's request to be deported to Chile.

Compensation

Fifty B.C. potato growers whose contracts went unhonored when a frozen food company closed its operation last May will receive $313,000 in federal-provincial assistance, Agriculture Minister Jim Hewitt said Tuesday.

Hewitt said the funds will go to potato growers in the Fraser Valley who had contracts with Spetifore Frozen Foods Ltd. which closed after losing $5 million.

April, 1977 Legal Date Upheld In Pollution Control Act Test

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Supreme Court ruled Tuesday that the provincial government can only bill companies for pollution that occurred after April, 1977.

In a test case, Environment Minister Jim Nielsen tried to collect $1,400 from a Vancouver trucking company which caused a minor oil spill in a lake 88 kilometres north of Prince George in September, 1976.

The supreme court said that if it agreed with the government's argument that the pollution existed when the section was proclaimed into law, it would mean mining companies could be held liable for things they did decades ago.

The court ruled it unreasonable to make such a finding.

Hospital Insolvency Denied

KELOWNA (CP) — Health Minister Bob McClelland said Tuesday that Kelowna General Hospital is not in any financial problems.

Hospital adminstrator Colin Elliott and trustees have said they fear the hospital faces a deficit of about $800,000 deficit at the end of the fiscal year.

McClelland said that the hospital "is not facing anything like an $800,00 deficit."

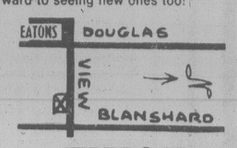

He said the deficit could be $100,000 but added that financial analysis say the hospital will come out in "a break-even situation."

He said the province has never picked up a hospital deficit but has made adjustments according to the experience of hospitals and "that will be done this year as usual."

McClelland said his ministry decided on a five-per-cent increase in hospital budget for 1979 by reading the economy. He said hospitals will have to work with that increase.

S. AFRICA FIRM ON NAMIBIA

UNITED NATIONS (Reuter) — South African Foreign Minister Roelof (Pik) Botha said Monday he believes two days of talks here with Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim have been constructive toward solving the problem of Namibia, also known as South-West Africa.

He said that prior to these discussions, a UN settlement plan worked out by the Western members — including Canada — of the Security Council was in jeopardy.

Botha said: "We worked hard and we have leaned over backwards to present Mr. Waldheim with a positive reaction."

Informed sources said Waldheim is trying to get South Africa to agree to the entry into Namibia before Jan. 15 of the first contingents of UN forces who would maintain security during the elections.

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada and other countries may have to consider further economic action against South Africa but a boycott could boomerang against black African states, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson said Tuesday.

Jamieson said at a Commons external affairs committee meeting he has warned some black African nations they could be hurt by the economic sanctions they are demanding against white-ruled South Africa.

There are close currency and trade links between South Africa and some neighboring African states, he said.

The external affairs minister refused to say how Canada will vote if United Nations plans for the South African-administered territory of Namibia should collapse and demands for a boycott are renewed.

Canada and four other Western members of the UN Security Council abstained two weeks ago when the council majority threatened to impose sanctions against South Africa unless it cancelled the pre-independence election it has scheduled in Namibia Dec. 4-8.

Jamieson said Canada did not want to rock the boat while there is still a chance the UN can supervise another set of elections in Namibia next year.

The external affairs minister and representatives of four other Western nations flew to Namibia and South Africa in October in efforts to break an impasse over Namibian independence.

A compromise emerged allowing South Africa to conduct internal elections in Namibia and the UN to supervise territorial elections next year. But South Africa indicated it would be up to the newly-elected body in Namibia to decide whether UN elections should be held.

The South African plan has been condemned by the South-West Africa People's Organization (SWAPO) and SWAPO's supporters among black African states. SWAPO, which has long been fighting South African rule in Namibia, has said it will not participate in the South African-administered elections.

South Africa has ruled the territory for more than 50 years. The UN cancelled the South African mandate in the mid-1960s but South Africa defied the ruling.

Jamieson said the world community may have to consider economic sanctions if South Africa becomes "recalcitrant or rigid" on the Namibian issue.

But Canada wants to keep the UN election plan alive to avoid "the kind of strident over-reaction" from African states which might force Canada and other countries into economic sanctions, he said.

"It isn't going to be an easy task either to get the world community to apply effective sanctions or indeed to protect some of the African neighboring countries from the detrimental effects of sanctions insofar as they are concerned."

He said he had "confronted some of the African countries with this dilemma."

Zambia, which has been supporting black guerrillas fighting in Rhodesia, recently decided to resume using the Rhodesian railroads. Zambia wants to move its copper through Rhodesia to South African ports.

South Africa and Rhodesia readily agreed to the Zambian move.

There have been recent reports that South Africa sold a record-breaking $415 million worth of food and other products to black Africa in the first eight months of this year.

Bill Offers Refugees Sanctuary

OTTAWA (CP) — The minister of justice could be required to rule whether capital punishment in foreign countries is humane under a bill now before the Senate.

The bill to amend the Fugitive Offenders Act would allow the minister to refuse extradition of a fugitive wanted in a foreign country if the person "would be likely to suffer an excessively severe or inhumane punishment."

This is wider discretion than was included in a version of the bill passed by the Senate last February, but which died in the Commons when the last session ended.

The first bill allowed the minister to refuse extradition if the offence was punishable by death, since the death penalty no longer exists in Canada.

As Senator George McIlraith (L—Ontario) explained in the Senate Monday, the new bill's provision is "altogether different in principle and is a wider discretion."

Conservative Senator Allister Grosart (Ontario) suggested that the bill equated capitan punishment with "inhumane punishment" and took away the minister's discretion to permit extradition.

McIlraith replied that a justice minister could allow a person to be returned to another country for prosecution even if his alleged offence was punishable by death.

The bill is designed to update the 96-year-old Fugitive Offenders Act, which requires the Canadian government to surrender any person wanted for an offence punishable by at least one year in prison and hard labor.

The law is largely unworkable because sentences of hard labor are rarely handed out. This section would be changed.

The law applies to people who have escaped to Canada from countries with which Canada has extradition treaties.

The old act also allows extradition for charges which would not be considered offences in Canada. This would be changed to protect refugees from "political, racial and religious oppression," McIlraith said in the Senate.

A person fleeing a revolution in his homeland would not be returned to face charges by a new government if such charges would not constitute an offence in Canada.

However, Canada could not refuse to surrender a fugitive wanted for a political offence — such as murder or kidnapping — against visiting heads of state or diplomats.

BABY DELAYS DEPORTATION

TORONTO (CP) — A Jamaican mother of two will be allowed to remain in Canada until the birth of her third child, due in early February.

Immigration authorities in Toronto have decided to delay deportation of Julia Farquharson, 28, because she is pregnant and unfit to travel.

Miss Farquharson, an unwed mother of a 1½-year-old boy and a girl, 4, both born in Canada, has lived in Canada for seven years. She is liable for deportation because she is a public charge and not a Canadian citizen.

She has lived in low-income, provincial housing, supported by mother's allowance, for about 3½ years.

Miss Farquharson said Monday she has no one to care for the children in Jamaica and that jobs are difficult to find there.

She said she hopes Bud Cullen, federal immigration minister, will allow the family to remain because the children are Canadian.

Chilean Granted Immigrant Status

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Pedro Denegri, a former Chilean engineer who left Canada after losing a two-year fight for political refugee status, is returning to Canada as a landed immigrant, his lawyer said Tuesday.

Trevor Bartram said Denegri was granted landed immigrant status two weeks ago. He had been expected to arrive last Saturday but Bartram said he had not heard from Denegri.

Denegri, 30, who had worked in Sarnia, Ont., was told by immigration officials to leave Canada or be deported after his work permit expired. He was told to follow the usual procedure of applying for landed immigrant status from outside Canada.

He had testified he was tortured and threatened by the military police of Chile's right-wing military junta.

"The big thing now is to get his wife and child out of Chile," the lawyer said.

He said the immigration department had denied the family entry into Canada but may reverse its stand now that Denegri has landed immigrant status.

Tent Family Aided

EDMONTON (CP) — The Alberta Housing Corp. (AHC) has come to the rescue of a native family in Valleyview, Alta., 460 kilometres northwest of here, which has been living in a summer tent after being refused accomodation in nearby government housing.

Gabriel Campbell, his wife and three small children were turned down by a Valleyview administrator who charged Campbell with having a drinking problem.

Tuesday, however, an official with the provincial housing and public works department said the family had been allocated a mobile home and moved 56 kilometres away.

The official denied that Campbell's alleged drinking problem was linked to the refusal of accomodation in one of the 10 AHC-funded homes in Valleyview.

DELINQUENT TAXPAYERS FINED $3M

OTTAWA (CP) — Revenue Canada has imposed penalties of almost $3 million in the last 12 months on 830 taxpayers who were late in filing their income tax returns.

A department statement Tuesday said 491 delinquents were from Ontario and were penalized $1.3 million; 153 from Quebec, $410,000; 101 Prairies residents, $848,000; 48 British Columbians, $277,000; and 34 Maritimes residents, about $66,000.

The penalty for attempted tax evasion is 50 per cent of the tax owing. In addition, the taxes must be paid along with accrued interest and a five per-cent late filing penalty to a maximum of $500.

Court action could also be taken against taxpayers who chronically file late returns, who never file returns or cease filing for a period of time.

Police 'Lost Interest' in Marion

MONTREAL (CP) — One of the journalists who acted as a messenger in attempted ransom drops during the Charles Marion kidnapping testified Tuesday that Quebec provincial police eventually lost interest in communiques from the presumed kidnappers.

Police officers and other witnesses have told Quebec Superior Court that they required all ransom notes to be turned over to them, and they seized a number of communiques addressed to Marion's family, friends and the credit union where he was chief loans officer.

But Normand Maltais, a television reporter for CHLT in Sherbrooke, said police were losing interest as the 82-day kidnapping neared its end.

Maltais, who acted as courier in two aborted ransom drops, said he received "a letter . . . some documents and a picture of a man with a chain around his neck" on Oct. 24, 1977, three days before Marion was finally released.

He said he followed the kidnappers' instructions to take the material to Marion's son, Pierre. He then took it to provincial police on his own initiative.

"They just weren't interested . . . I showed it to them. They didn't want to know about it."

Marion was finally released after a successful drop of $50,000 in ransom money.

Maltais was testifying at the trial, now in its eighth week, of Claude and Jeanne Valence. They are accused of conspiring with Michel De Varenne to kidnap Marion, with actually kidnapping him and forcibly detaining him, with extortion and attempted extortion.

BLACKOUT HITS ITALY

ROME (Reuter) — A 30-minute blackout over a large area of central and southern Italy caused chaos in many cities, including Rome.

Electricity officials said millions of Italians turned on their heaters to beat the cold and possibly overloaded the system. Hospitals were left without electricity, hundreds of persons were trapped in elevators and traffic lights stopped working.

The Valences' three sons — Pierre, Luc and Benoit — appeared as defence witnesses Tuesday, corroborating earlier testimony that their parents were at home watching a televised heavyweight championship fight on the evening of Sept. 29, 1977, when Maltais and others made the second fruitless attempt at a drop-off.

The testimony contradicts a statement by De Varenne, who told police investigators that on the evening of Sept. 29 he was hiding in the woods with Claude Valence waiting for the ransom to be delivered.

De Varenne, who has since told the court that he made the statement to police after being threatened, has refused to testify at the trial of the Valences. But the judge ordered his earlier statement read into evidence.

Feds Cut Meat, Not Fat, In Medical Budget: Critics

OTTAWA (CP) — Progressive Conservatives said Tuesday the federal government is committed to irrational spending restraint, particularly in the area of medical research.

They said the government should be making savings by chopping waste but instead is cutting spending in the wrong places.

Flora MacDonald, the party's critic on federal-provincial affairs, said the government is saving fat and throwing away meat rather than the other way around.

Lincoln Alexander, critic on government operations, said medical research in Canada is going down the drain because of the arrogant, callous, heavy-handed, unilateral action of the government.

These two and others said the government should be concentrating on overcoming waste found by the auditor-general rather than hitting medical research.

Public Works Minister Andre Ouellet rejected the arguments, saying the Conservatives want things both ways. The party told businessmen that it sought cuts in government spending, then MPs complained when reductions were made.

He said the government is committed to $2.5 billion in cuts over a two-year period. The cuts were made after consultation with the provinces, the last of these being the recent meeting of the federal and provincial finance ministers.

The debate was over a government bill allowing it to reduce payments under the health resources fund, a fund that is being wound down as a result of the government's restraint package.

The fund was started in 1966 to help provinces pay for training of researchers and health services technicians, among other things.

The government has said the fund has done its work and that it will save $84 million by ending it.

In two days of debate the Conservatives and New Democrats have castigated the government on the grounds it is withdrawing support for needed medical research and development, both in this legislation and other ways.

Miss MacDonald said that it is ironic that while premiers are here to discuss the country's economy, the Commons was debating a bill that is one more example of the government's heavy-handed approach in its dealing with provinces.

There had been no consultation with the provinces before it was decided to cut the fund. As a result some province's were committed to programs that they would have to pay for without expected federal help.

The government was making cuts in equalization payments to poorer provinces, in unemployment insurance, in medical research. Instead it should be cutting waste and over-expenditures.

The government was once again showing itself as opposed to medical research.

Alexander said the government is exciting and inflaming the Canadian people by misleading them about spending restraint.

The government felt it could buy its research from outside the country. Its policies effect the medical care of individuals, the health of the nation, the ability of Canadians to be technical leaders and employment.

"When you start playing around with the health of the nation then the nation must be doomed."

Civil Servants On the Run

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 60,000 persons jogged and exercised this year under an employee fitness plan sponsored by the federal fitness branch of the health department, it was announced Tuesday.

The branch was able to sell the plan to 51 Canadian companies and 60 per cent of them will continue the program next year at their own expense, says a news release.

As a result of the study, says the branch, employees of the Nova Scotia health department climbed more than 30,000 stairs; 200 Civic Hospital employees in Ottawa won jogging, walking or bicycling achievement awards; and more than 100 marched across Regina in bad weather.

CUPW TRIALS SLATED

OTTAWA (CP) — Jean Claude Parrot, president of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW), has been ordered to stand trial April 2 in Ontario Supreme Court here on a charge of defying Parliament, a union spokesman said Monday.

Parrot, the union and nine of its executives were charged last month when they ignored the Oct. 19 legislation that ordered the 23,000 striking inside workers back to their posts.

The spokesman said national executives Leroy Hiltz, Sid Baxter, David Lewis Jones and Andre Beauchamps, all of Ottawa, have been remanded to April 2.

Darrell Tingley of Halifax, CUPW's Atlantic director, Frank Walden of Vancouver, director of the Western region, Clement Morel of Montreal, director of the Quebec region, and Bill Dagleish of Toronto, director of the Ontario region, were charged earlier this month with disobeying Parliament and will probably be tried in their own cities.

Meanwhile, Robert Andstein, president of the Nova Scotia local, was ordered Tuesday to stand trial Feb. 6 on a charge of common assault.

The charges against them arose from an Oct. 17 incident in which post office supervisor Gerald Pratt was allegedly assaulted by Andstein and Ballam.

Andstein has entered a plea of not guilty to the charge.

Foreign Bank Controls Eyed

OTTAWA (CP) — Future competition from foreign banks will help improve the banking system but limits are needed to ensure Canadian-owned institutions do not face unfair pressure Gerald Bouey, governor of the Bank of Canada, said Tuesday.

Bouey, appearing before the Commons finance committee on proposed changes to the Bank Act, said domestic chartered banks should ot be subjected to undue risks arising from competitimn from large foreign-owned corporations.

But he said the legislation, as proposed, includes limits that should provide protection.

The legislation, which represents a regular overhaul of banking laws, would permit foreign banks to operate in Canada. But it would allow them up to only $500 million in authorized capital and would limit total assets of all foreign banks to 15 per cent of the country's total commercial financing.

Foreign bankers have complained that this places them in a second-class position in the country.

But he also said: "At the same time I feel that the principle of applying some limits to the growth of foreign banks in Canada is not unreasonable and is indeed desireable in view of the risks and uncertainties we would invite by opening the door too widely."

Earlier, W. A. Kennett, federal inspector-general of banks, said foreign banks entering the country would have to show that their operations would be a clear advantage to Canada.

Federal banking authorities would follow tests much like those used by the Foreign Investment Review Agency (FIRA), Kennett said.

ANTI-ABORTION FUND 'BURGLED'

WINNIPEG (CP) — Joe Borowski has accused Revenue Canada of burgling the bank account of the anti-abortion group that he heads.

In an interview, Borowski said federal tax officials seized $32,080 Monday from an account at a Winnipeg credit union. He said the account was in the name of the Alliance Against Abortion.

The former Manitoba cabinet minister has refused to file income tax returns for the last several years to protest use of public funds to pay for legal abortions.

"I owe the federal government money, but they have no right to take the money from our organization," he said.

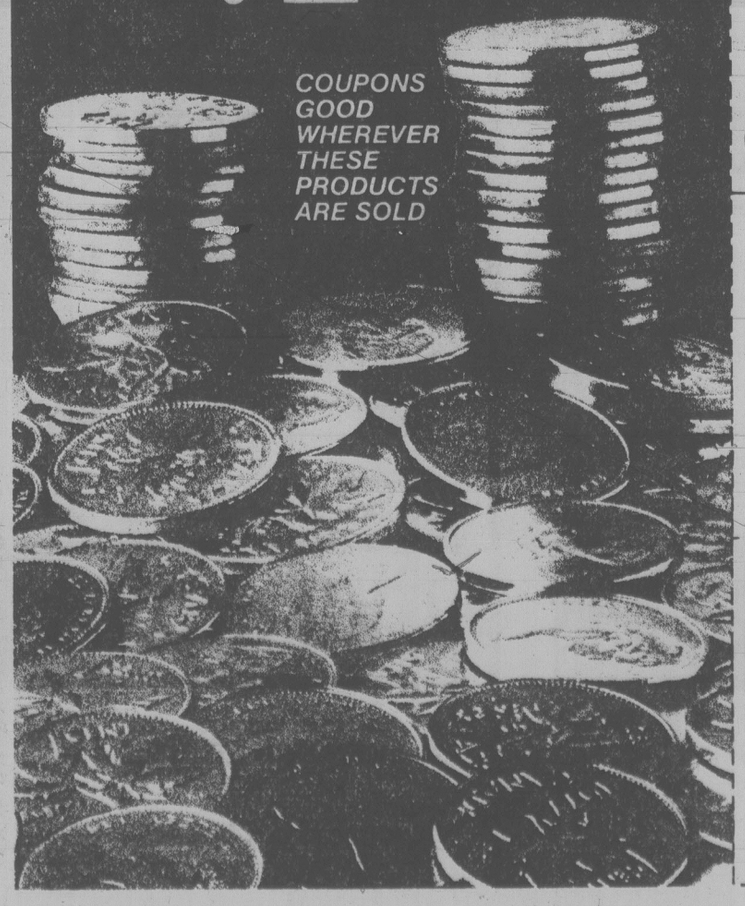

Borowski said the seizure of the funds followed a meeting with Revenue Canada officials Monday morning.

Foreign Press Agog At 'Hsi Tan Democracy'

By JOHN FRASER
The Globe and Mail

PEKING — Hsi Tan democracy erupted in Peking again Monday at a meeting held between all the foreign correspondents based here and thousands of citizens gathered beside a brick wall on Cahang An Avenue near Hsi Tan Street. The correspondents had been invited by the masses on Sunday night following an impromptu get-together with several foreigners.

At its peak, the crowd at the "Hsi Tan democracy wall" — site of a week-long big character poster campaign — was estimated to be more than 5,000. It is difficult for me to describe exactly what was going on around this crowd because for 30 minutes I was at the centre, fulfilling a promise to the people I had made the night before.

On the previous occasion, the syndicated Washington political columnist, Richard Novak, had accompanied me to the Hsi Tan site where we were surrounded by an eager crowd with which we held an animated exchange. When the crowd learned that Novak might be meeting Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping the next day, it deluged Novak and myself with statements and questions to be passed on to Teng.

Just before we left this scene Sunday night, people in the crowd asked us if we would return and report on the meeting with Teng if it took place. I said I would return as part of my duty as a journalist but I was not a leader or someone who should make speeches in the People's Republic.

The crowd swelled after our departure and held its own meeting. There were other foreign journalists there and the invitation to return the next night was issued. Monday morning, Novak got his interview with Teng and at the end of it he told the vice-premier about his experience the night before and presented some of the questions the people had asked.

When I spoke to him later in the afternoon, Novak said commitments with officials would keep him from joining the Hsi Tan meeting but he authorized me to tell the people what Teng had said about the questions and the Hsi Tan situation.

Shortly before 7 p.m., my wife and I arrived at the Hsi Tan site where the crowd had assembled. All the foreign correspondents in Peking were there, along with numerous observers.

I learned later that before our arrival, crowd leaders had been shouting to the people that they must be orderly and disciplined because many foreign friends would be present. "If we do not conduct this meeting properly," said one," no one will believe we are ready for democracy."

Being at the centre of all this was possibly the worst place to report on what was going on inside the ranks of the people. It took at least 15 minutes to bring the meeting to order, and several times excitement overwhelmed some people so much that the crowd surged forward from all directions.

At one point I found myself being hoisted up on two sturdy sets of Chinese shoulders so people could see me in the back and calm down.

Quite frankly, all I wanted to do at this point was read the information I had from Novak and clear out. Unfortunately, it first required a volunteer interpreter from the crowd and several sturdy-voiced men to pass on the word. When that finally got organized I read out this short report:

"The American journalist Robert Novak met with Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping this afternoon in the Great Hall of the People. Journalist Novak said I could tell you the following.

"He told Mr. Teng that he had spoken to a large crowd of people at Hsi Tan democracy wall and that the people had some questions to ask.

"Vice-Premier Teng said that he thought the Hsi Tan democracy wall was a fine thing.

Vice-Premier Teng also said he thought some of the things the masses were saying there were incorrect. For example, he said that he did not agree with the 70-30 evaluation of Chairman Mao. He said Chairman Mao was better than that (this refers to several wall posters which said Chairman Mao was 70 per cent good and 30 per cent incorrect).

"Vice-Premier Teng indicated to journalist Novak that it was possible that (former defence minister) Peng Teh-huai would be rehabilitated shortly.

"Journalist Novak told Vice Premier Teng that whenever the vice-premier's name was mentioned, the people cheered their support. Vice-Premier Teng said he did not approve of this because he was only 60-40. He said Peng Teh-huai was also only 60-40. When journalist Novak asked him about the rehabilitation of (former head of state) Liu Hsiao-chi, Vice-Premier Teng made no response to this question.

"This is the information given to me by journalist Novak and I have fulfilled my promise to you to return and make a report. Now I would like to leave because my job is done and I have nothing else to say."

With that I made a remarkably easy exit at the thinnest point of the crowd, a crowd I should point out that was extraordinarily well-disciplined despite periodic moments of confusion.

There was a surging effect 15 minutes later when it dispersed and some people, including a couple of foreigners, received superficial wounds. As far as I have been able to discover, no one was seriously injured — Chinese or foreigner.

The crowd then proceeded across the broad expanse of Chang An Avenue after someone suggested they go to Tien An Men square to continue the discussion.

They grouped in an informal phalanx of about 20 to 25 people wide and proceeded toward the famous heart of Peking where so much of recent Chinese history has been played out. They linked arms as they walked and sang the Internationale and the Chinese national anthem.

After arriving in Tien An Men, one of those things happened that astounds foreigners not fully aware of how disciplined a society China has become since 1949. With hardly any words spoken, this large group (which had dwindled by now to around 2,000) broke into three main sections and for about 10 minutes they discussed what to do. Eventually most decided to go to the martyr's monument in the centre.

Other smaller groups, with foreigners in the middle, dallied to continue lively discussions on journalism, law, elections, human rights and the present world situation.

At the monument, my report on Teng was repeatedly read out, interspersed by various statements and speeches from several people.

Someone talked about learning from the Yugoslavian experience. Another said that in the United States, there was a bourgeois democracy and the Chinese people did not want this. They wanted, he said, a proletarian democracy, but this did not mean that there wasn't anything to learn from bourgeois democracy. He particularly pointed out the importance of separating the executive, legislative and judiciary powers.

The various group discussions were on a wide variety of subjects. I got involved with the correspondent of the Australian Broadcasting Corp., Richard Thwaites, in a discussion on journalism. We asked people if the evening's events would be reported in the People's Daily, and a huge, spontaneous laugh went up.

"No," said one very articulate young man, "The People's Daily only reflects the views and perspective of the leaders. It does not represent the true feelings of ordinary people. We would like to see the People's Daily report what the masses really feel as well as what the leaders think, and in this way it would be a truly great newspaper."

We then moved on to a discussion of Reference News, the extraordinary daily newspaper circulated to more than 15 million trusted Chinese (all the way down to middle school) that publishes the reports of Western journalists.

This is a good thing, we were told, but more people should be allowed to read it. There was also a more privileged version of Reference News available only to very senior people and this was wrong, they said.

Still another group, joined by British journalists, had a discussion on the arts. The Chinese here said they wanted to see more foreign films, read more foreign books and they also wanted to have big dances in order to socialize in a friendly but organized manner. They would like foreigners to be able to attend these dances.

And still there was more. Another group, accompanied by a British and a French journalist, had a discussion on Soviet dissidents, led by several young people who were completely up-to-date on the major figures in the movement there.

The talk went on to discuss contradictions in U.S. foreign policy over human rights and the question was put to the journalists: "Why is there so little reflection of human rights problems in China from the Western press?"

If all of this makes mind-boggling reading, it has been no less of an amazement to the resident journalists who have been overwhelmed by the deluge of new, specific information on what young Chinese people are thinking (the vast majority of people were in their young 20s and are either students or workers).

At the moment, everyone is simply trying to cover as much of the discussions as possible and figure out what it all means later. When the crowds dispersed from Tien An Men, the word went out that everyone — foreigners included — should meet again at Hsi Tan Tuesday.

Health Food Advertising Curbs Aired

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Federal Trade Commission staff Tuesday proposed rules to give consumers better nutrition information by restricting the way natural, organic, low cholesterol and other foods may be advertised.

If the agency accepts the proposal, some foods — instant bouillion, certain potato chips and frozen french fried onion rings were mentioned — could no longer be touted as "natural."

Ads for low-cholestrol margarine and similar foods would not be allowed to tout the product as a virtual prescription for preventing heart disease. They would have to discuss the role of the total diet in maintaining health.

"As consumers have become more conscious of health and the part nutrition plays in maintaining health, they have become more vulnerable to health-related claims for food products," the report said.

It said the food industry spends $1.3 billion each year in advertising and "an increasing percentage of it" is making nutritional claims.

The rules were first proposed in 1974. The latest version, based on extensive hearings, is significantly different: It would allow advertising, with restrictions, for natural and organic foods, whereas the original proposal would have banned such ads; and it would permit discussion of the heart disease, cholesterol and fat question, within limits.

The initial proposal forbade mention of that controversy.

The latest proposal would permit foods to advertise themselves as natural or organic only if they are "minimally processed" and contain no artificial or synthetic additives.

Nothing, however, may be advertised as a "health food."

In addition, ads would "be permitted to discuss the possible relationships between diet and the risk of heart and artery disease under terms of the rule, but false, exaggerated and misleading claims about health benefits would not be permitted."

The proposal now will be offered for public comment. The staff said the five agency commissioners will likely decide its future within six months.

Radio Tapes Welcome Gift To Archives

A North Vancouver man's unusual hobby has turned into a rare find for the Provincial Archives Aural History section.

The late Fred Smith taped and indexed some 400 hours of political radio broadcasts between 1961 and 1975.

Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy said she is thankful for Smith's foresight in recording the programs.

"We sometimes forget that what happens today is history tomorrow," she said.

"The material on these tapes was commonplace when they were made, but now they are an increasingly valuable historical documentary record of 15 years of public affairs in British Columbia."

LA PAZ (Reuter) — Thirty-one persons were killed and 11 injured when a bus crashed over a precipice near Santa Cruz, 800 kilometres southeast of the Bolivian capital, police said.

Bergenia: Attractive, Reliable

GARDENING
hilda beastall

Much has been written about groundcovers with the result that a choice is available to suit most situations and the taste of most gardeners.

In small places, however, a soil cover is wanted that will not spread out of its bounds, yet will be attractive at all seasons without depleting the soil nutrients of the feature plants nearby.

Late November is a good time to think about this little problem for whatever looks good so late in fall is likely to be satisfactory for 12 months. So I suggest thinking about the large-leaved Bergenia cordifolia. This quite commonly seen plant has been reclassified by botanists from its original Saxafraga name, later being given a new generic name of Megasea by which it is sometimes known.

These changes are needed as intensive studies are possible with today's complex instruments revealing differences and similarities in plant parts. So today, this old-time humble plant is known as Bergenia.

The leaves of this Bergenia are smooth, shiny, and dark green in summer. At present they are turning to bronzy-brown where touched by frost in sunshine.

Their size of four to five inches across is one feature which recommends the plant as a groundcover. Roughly heart-shaped (hence 'cordifolia' meaning 'heart-leaf'), each leaf may cover 16 to 25 square inches of soil.

Only a sudden severe frost, or a prolonged low temperature of minus 10° C. or lower, really harms these leaves. Even then, new growth usually appears from the rootstocks by late spring.

In our normal winters of occasional cold spells and snowfalls of six or so inches at one time, clusters of the bright pink flower buds can be seen at the bottom of a hole melting in the snow.

This is a phenomenon of plant growth that heat is generated sufficient to melt an air space in snow around the growing point. Seldom is the spring display spoiled.

As with many of the Saxafraga family this Bergenia is deep-rooting. Unlike many, it is not fussy about soil, for it gets along well in prepared soil having a clay base and apparently does not rely on the top soil once the deep roots are established.

As a groundcover for raised areas surrounding a patio, in full sun or partial sun, Bergenia cordifolia will increase its coverage at moderate speed; new stems appear from the sides of the original thick stem. These root as they touch topsoil and soon become as deeply rooted as the parent plant.

In late fall, or in early spring, these pieces can be cut off and lifted with their first fine roots to set out for establishing as new plants. As groundcover beneath leaf-losing (deciduous) trees with moderate growth and leaf coverage, Bergenia may have a place in protecting the ground in winter with attractive foliage, adding its fine pink flower color to the spring display of tree flowers, and increasing the coverage of leaves to prevent baking of the soil each summer.

The moving sun and shadow pattern created by the trees will keep growth from becoming weakened, which happens in dense shade.

An old-time friend, given a new job in today's garden. Who talks or believes in retirement at any age?

Horns of Dilemma

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — City councillor Ralph Landers says Saint John Common Council holds too many meetings in secret and he has considered skipping such in-camera sessions as a matter of principle. But he said he worries that by doing so he would not be serving the city and its people.

CIVILIANS FLEEING TANZANIANS: AMIN

NAIROBI (Reuter) — Civilians are fleeing southern Ugandan towns following an invasion by the Tanzanian army and armed Ugandan exiles, an aide of Ugandan President Idi Amin said today.

The aide said he visited the market town of Masaka Tuesday and saw taxis arriving from the battle zone packed with civilian casualties.

"At the hospital they said they had been viciously attacked at Kyotera by Ugandan exiles — (former president Milton) Obote's people," he said in a telephone interview from Kampala.

Canada Health System 'Error'

CHICAGO (AP) — A Canadian neurologist says Canada's national health insurance system has brought a decline in health care.

Dr. Raymond Robillard of Montreal said Tuesday that indicators of the decline include a decrease in available hospital beds and a trend by doctors to be "pushed out" to remote areas of the country where a lack of sophisticated equipment prevents some of them from practising their specialties.

Robillard appeared before a Senate subcommittee on health and scientific research headed by Senator Edward Kennedy (Dem. Mass.).

Kennedy said that the current U.S. system of costly medical treatment "is a peculiar kind of American Darwinism—survival of the wealthiest."

Defending his proposal for national health insurance, Kennedy said the controversial issue will not die because "every American knows the fear of illness."

That fear has two parts—fear of the illness itself and fear that the person will not be able to pay his hospital bills.

Robillard, who went to medical school in Boston, admonished Kennedy not to "make the horrible mistake of destroying what you have" by thinking that the only way to correct high medical costs is to turn the system over to the state and federal governments.

"I don't know what the answer is," he said, "but I think we (Canadians) have made a mistake."

$26.4B Defence Budget

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet Union announced a 1979 defence budget of $26.4 billion, or about one-quarter of what U.S. officials estimate it to be, and reported the economy made big gains in 1978 despite considerable drawbacks.

The projected defence expenditure was the same as that announced for 1978. It was announced today at the opening of the winter meeting of the Supreme Soviet, the Soviet parliament, by Finance Minister Vasily Garbuzov.

As President Leonid Brezhnev and other top leaders listened, Garbuzov said the Soviet Union has repeatedly made proposals on the problems of disarmament, but "aggressive imperialist circles are resisting the relaxation of international tensions, whipping up the arms race and trying to achieve military superiority."

French Warm Up to Cocky Nixon

Times News Services

PARIS — Richard Nixon served notice Tuesday night that he considers the time has come for him to resume speaking out regularly on public issues after his relative silence since he resigned under the threat of impeachment over the Watergate scandal.

He chose as his forum for a wide-ranging discussion of current events and the foreign policy record of his own administration, a three-hour television program in which he answered a broad selection from an avalanche of questions telephoned in by a public that is overwhelmingly favorable to him.

Looking rested, healthy and relaxed, Nixon said, "Let me make just one thing clear, I'm not just going to fade away and live the good life in San Clemente listening to the waves and playing golf."

He chuckled at a viewer's question about whether he would like to become secretary-general of the United Nations and said he had no intention of ever seeking elective office again.

Nixon seemd genuinely touched by the flood of good wishes and favorable comments that French viewers asked the telephone operators to convey along with the questions. The organizers of the show said the comments were running 80 to 90 percent in Nixon's favor.

Asked why the French public likes him better than the American one, Nixon replied that it was basically because the French are more interested in world affairs than Americans and more prone to judge him on the basis of his foreign policy record than Americans.

Nixon did not take the opportunity some of the questions gave him to back off from his previous statements of regret for the way he handled Watergate. Some of his mea culpas sounded, if anything, slightly stronger than ones he made in the series of interviews he gave to British TV personality David Frost in 1977.

They also seemed to come more easily. This time, there was little hesitancy in saying the words and an apparent self-assurance in his delivery that seemed to border on pride when he went on to speak about his administration's foreign policy.

Of his presidency, he said: "My greatest satisfaction was the ability to do good." He spoke of his "passion for peace" and pointed to his opening toward China as his greatest single achievement. "The contribution there was worth all the agonies I went through during the last days of the presidency."

Troops Control Refinery As Iranian Strikes Grow

Times News Services

TEHRAN — Troops took control at the Tehran refinery and guarded the National Iranian Radio and Television Co. today to offset mounting strikes as this nation of Moslems prepared for its holy period of mourning.

Unrest paralyzed the holy eastern city of Mashad despite new concessions to Moslem opponents of the shah's regime.

Troops fired into the air and used teargas to disperse angry demonstrators who shouted "revenge" for a pro-shah attack on hundreds of cars belonging to Mashad residents.

In Tehran, shooting broke out today in the traditional shopping district around Istanbul Avenue and huge queues formed at gasoline stations amid fears of another power blackout after a protest shutdown Tuesday night paralyzed the city for more than two hours, creating panic among its 4.5 million residents.

Cars in the capital waited in line for hours to refuel at the capital's gasoline pumps after soldiers manned tank trucks to deliver gasoline from the refinery to dealers. A wildcat strike by 50 per cent of refinery personnel forced the stations shut Tuesday, creating shortages of gasoline and home fuel.

Authorities today presented new concessions by banning all music broadcasts during the mourning period. At the same time, mourners were told self-flagellation rites carried on through 14 centuries were banned and indoor ceremonies restricted to those permitted by the military.

In other developments, a threatened strike by Iran's national airline fizzled after the military arrested 10 ringleaders and freed them after winning a pledge the strike was off.

U.S. Checking After CIA Goof

By DON OBERDORFER
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The United States in recent weeks has initiated substantial and continuing contacts with the opposition to the Shah of Iran and informed the shah that it was doing so, according to administration officials.

The contacts, coming after years of minimal connections to the internal forces opposing the Iranian leader, is among the early results of growing displeasure in the White House with U.S. embassy and intelligence reporting on political developments in that strife-torn country.

Any shifts in policy or operations that would be seen in Tehran as undercutting the shah would go against the strong thrust of U.S. objectives there.

But at the same time, failure to remedy the intelligence deficiences would leave the United States flying blind in a still-developing situation of great international importance, according to concerned officials.

A draft CIA assessment of mid-August, which was circulated among several government agencies before being rejected by top CIA officials, reported that "Iran is not in a revolutionary or even pre-revolutionary situation."

Several weeks later, well-coordinated domonstrations involving more than 1 million people in Tehran alone disproved the optimistic estimate — but U.S. intelligence reportedly had little information on how the demonstrations were planned, organized or funded, or who was behind them.

Boumedienne Hanging On

ALGIERS (Reuter) — Algerian President Houari Boumedienne was clinging to life early today after relapsing into a deep coma on Monday.

The international team of doctors treating him believed the next few hours would be critical to whether he would survive, informed sources said.

They had been considering surgery to remove a blood clot from his brain, but have decided that he was too ill to be moved, the sources said.

Boumedienne, 51, who seized power in a bloodless coup in 1965, first went into a coma on Nov. 18. He had returned to the country a few days earlier after medical treatment in the Soviet Union.

In Sweden, Prof. Jan Waldenstroem, a cancer specialist with the medical team, said Tuesday Boumedienne is suffering from a type of blood cancer.

Eritrea Rebels Crushed, Says Ethiopia

NAIROBI (UPI) — Ethiopia says it has crushed the rebellion in Eritrea, Africa's oldest war and the second insurrection the Marxist regime has put down in less than a year.

The government Tuesday said its forces had recaptured the town of Keren, the last major population center held by guerrillas in the northwestern Ethiopian province of Eritrea.

"The backbone of the secessionist forces has been completely crushed," Ethiopian Ambassador Mengiste Desta told a news conference in Nairobi.

Asked if the Ethiopians now consider the Eritrean war over with the Monday victory in Keren, Desta said "Yes, it is definitely defeated. All major parts of Eritrea are contolled by Ethiopia."

Nevertheless, he added, "there are still pockets of resistance for us to mop up."

The Eritreans have been fighting since 1961 for the independence of their province along the Red Sea. An Italian colony from the late 19th Century until the end of the Second World War, Eritrea was later incorporated into Ethiopia through a referendum that most diplomats at the time considered rigged.

Until last July, the guerrillas held 98 percent of the province. But helped by Cuban advisers and massive miltary aid from the Soviet Union, the Ethiopians launched a counter-offensive and recaptured most of it.

But Desta denied Eritrean charges that Cuban troops, who helped Ethiopia win its recent desert war with Somalia, had been deployed in the battle for Eritrea.

Brotherly Hatred in Nicaragua

MANAGUA (AP) — "I have this horrible nightmare all the time now," the young Nicaraguan woman said as she sipped her coffee.

"My brother in the national guard is walking down the street with his machine-gun. He comes to a body and takes off the red and black Sandinista bandana. He sees that it is my other brother he has just killed."

The young woman, who refused to be identified by name, has taken an underground name and says she supports the Sandinista National Liberation Front's fight to overthrow President Anastasio Somoza and disband the national guard, Nicaragua's army.

Joined by thousands of their countrymen, the Sandinista guerrillas led a two-week uprising in September and seized control of five cities. The national guard put down the rebellion in bloody battles in which Red Cross officials estimated at least 1,500 people were killed, but the Sandinistas have vowed to strike again.

"My brother is an officer in the guard," the 24-year-old woman said. "He has killed many people, although he says he has never killed anyone in cold blood. But the Sandinistas have told me he is on the list of people they will kill when they take over.

"I already have my black dress. I will cry and be very sad. But if there was any decency left in him, he would leave the national guard, even if he had to scrub floors to earn money."

The woman, who comes from a family with a military tradition, said she joined a Maoist group at the national university and then turned to the Sandinistas because of the repression of Somoza and the guard.

The president's father founded the Somoza family dictatorship that has ruled Nicaragua for 44 years. The woman's father served with the elder Somoza in the early days of the national guard after the U.S. marines withdrew in the 1930s.

Three-Year Fight To Quit Russia Ends

VIENNA (UPI) — Boris and Natalya Katz ended their three-year battle to leave the Soviet Union today, arriving in Vienna on their way to the United States to get medical help for their daughter Jessica.

"It's a great relief to be in the West," said Boris Katz, a computer engineer. Katz flew from Moscow with his wife Natalya and two daughters, one-year-old Jessica and week old Gabriella.

"We want to proceed to the United States as soon as possible to seek medical treatment for Jessica," he said.

Jessica suffers from a serious digestive disease, an inability to digest milk fats, that could not be treated in the Soviet Union, Katz said.

He said doctors in Boston, Mass. have said they will try to help Jessica. "We will fly to Boston on Thursday and are looking forward to meeting our relatives there," Katz said.

Jessica has survived in the Soviet Union on a special American-made milk powder.

"They confiscated the milk powder at the Moscow airport shortly before our departure," Katz said. "We had a lot of troubles before they returned it to us after searching all our bags."

Immediately after his arrival, Katz phoned his mother Khaika and his brothers Viktor and Mikhail in Boston and said "We are all looking forward to a family reunion in the United States."

Katz said his family intends to apply for U.S. citizenship and make the United States their permament home.

The Katz's fight for the right to emigrate was intensified last year after it was discovered that Jessica suffered from the rare digestive disorder. The couple's departure was held up at the last minute last week by red tape because of the premature birth of Gabriella.

But Natalya said it was probably better Gabriella was born in Moscow.

"I would have been unhappy travelling with the baby expected any day," she said. "It all worked out for the best in the end."

The couple first applied to emigrate three years ago, but were turned down.

In September, Sen. Edward Kennedy, Dem.-Mass., visited Moscow and included the Katzes on a list of families whose cases he submitted to Soviet authorities for review.

East Europe Buzzing At Romania's Defiance

VIENNA (Reuter) — Romania's relations with its Warsaw pact allies were under intense strain today following staunchly independent speeches by Romanian President Nicolae Ceausescu.

Ceausescu first said during the weekend that he argued over defence spending with his allies at a Warsaw pact meeting in Moscow last week and then said in a speech Tuesday night that Romania takes orders from no one.

He told a meeting of army chiefs, senior officers and interior ministry officials that Romania's army is responsible to Bucharest alone and rejected closer integration of Warsaw pact armies.

"We shall never permit any Romanian unit or soldier to take orders from outside," he said. "It is only from within the country that they will be given orders to fight."

Eastern Europe buzzed with reports Tuesday that Soviet-bloc governments had withdrawn their ambassadors from Bucharest in anger at Ceausescu's stand, but they turned out to be untrue.

Western diplomats said the Czechoslovak, East German and Polish envoys attended a Yugoslav reception in Bucharest Tuesday night. Ambassadors from the Soviet Union, Bulgaria and Hungary were reported to be at home on official business.

But there are still suggestions that all six Soviet-bloc envoys may be absent by the time the Romanian leader makes a scheduled major speech on Friday.

Romania, the only Soviet-bloc country to maintain diplomatic ties with Israel, angered the Kremlin this summer by playing host to Chairman Hua Kuo-feng of China, the Kremlin's arch enemy.

The president has started a campaign at home to rally support for his Moscow stand, saying Romanian living standards are more important than increased defence expenditure.

Scores of letters of support have been sent to Bucharest newspapers in what appeared to be a carefully orchestrated campaign, diplomatic observers said.

RITUAL KILLER ARRESTED

SESHEGO, South Africa (AP) — A man believed responsible for the ritual killing of 19 children during the last year has been arrested, police said today.

They said he was seized shortly after he slit the throat of an eight-year-old girl and removed the wind pipe.

The belief in witchcraft among blacks remains strong in South Africa, and ritual killings and parts of the body regularly are used in the preparation of potions and medicines.

Halifax Repairs for Sub Makes Waves in Britain

LONDON (CP) — A Royal Navy decision to send one of its submarines to Canada for repairs — because British shipyards can't handle the job — has touched off a tempest here.

HMS Sealion, a conventional submarine, is scheduled to go to Halifax for a routine servicing and at least two members of Parliament have questioned the decision.

Fred Burden, Conservative MP for Gillingham, says "Somewhere in Britain there must be a dockyard that could do this work," a sentiment concurred in by Robert Bean, Labor MP for Rochester and Chatham.

Both say they are worried that a precedent might be set.

A defence ministry spokesman confirmed that sending the Sealion to Canada was a departure for the navy.

"It is very rare to go overseas," he said. "This is probably the first time since the war."

He said, however, that the circumstances are unusual.

"The royal dockyards are overloaded with work and the Sealion repairs couldn't be done until March.

"That is unacceptable because, unless the service is done before January, the sub can't dive and would not be operational."

The spokesman is quoted as saying only two commercial yards in Britain could handle the work and that there was doubt whether they could do it in time.

"The Canadians had spare capacity and asked us for work," the spokesman said.

Canada is reported to be charging only direct costs for labor and materials.

Bean said the decision was "unsatisfactory."

"This comes at a time when I was hoping for more work to come to the dockyards, creating more jobs," he said.

The move was also criticized by a spokesman for the Confederation of Shipbuilding and Engineering Unions at Chatham naval base.

"It is amazing when you consider that more than 12,000 shipyard workers have just been laid off at Tyneside because of lack of work," he said.

U.S. Eyes Fortune Left After Suicides

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. state department said Tuesday it may attempt to recover millions of dollars in cash and property found at the site of a mass suicide in Guyana to pay the tab for returning the bodies of the more than 900 victims.

The department said that as of last Saturday, the government had spent from $2 million to $3 million to return the bodies. Unofficial accounts have placed the cost as high as $8 million.

The department said the question of recovering the money "is a complex legal matter which will have to be sorted out." A spokesman said a member of the department's legal staff left Tuesday for Guyana "to assist the embassy in addressing a wide range of legal issues."

The spokesman added that its legal inquiry has no bearing on the Peoples Temple in San Francisco. He added: "Questions regarding Peoples Temple funds which may be here in the U.S. should be directed to the department of justice or appropriate state authorities."

Earlier in the day, Representative Edward Beard (Dem. R.I.) said he wrote a letter to President Carter saying it is unfair to ask tax-payers to foot the bill for the Guyana operation.

While Stocks Last . . .

DUBLIN (Reuter) — The first shop in the Irish republic to sell contraceptives opened in Dublin Tuesday and ran out of stocks within an hour.

The sale of contraceptives in the predominantly Catholic country is forbidden by law although family planning clinics are allowed to give them away.

The shop is sponsored by an organization attempting to reform the republic's birth control laws. A spokesman for the organization said the profits will go toward paying fines and financing a court action against the ban.

Ford Replacing Defective Parts

WASHINGTON (WP) — Under threat of possible legal action from the Federal Trade Commission, the Ford Motor Co. announced Tuesday that it would voluntarily contact the owners of some 1.8 million cars and inform them that they may have prematurely worn engine parts.

In addition, Ford said that the parts in question would be replaced at the company's expense, if found to be worn.

Ford said in a statement by Chester Barion, general manager of its parts and service division, that the cars involved are 1974-1977 models and early 1978 models equipped with 2.3-litre, four-cylinder engines.

He said letters would be mailed shortly to car owners advising them that the comany would repair "any camshaft-rocker-arm wear that occurred within 36 months or 36,000 miles, whichever comes first, from the time the vehicle was first put into service."

Ford owners who already have paid for such repairs will be reimbursed, Barion said.

U.S. Ties Stressed By Japan's PM-Elect

TOKYO (UPI) — In his first policy statement, Prime Minister-elect Masayoshi Ohira Tuesday said friendly relations with the United States will remain the "cornerstone" of Japan's foreign policy.

Ohira, 68, said he would pursue Japan's traditional policy of maintaining friendly relations with the United States while trying to promote cooperation with other Asian and Pacific nations.

The new premier said Japan's relations with the United States would "remain the cornerstone of Japan's standing policy of promoting co-operation with all countries around the world."

Without setting for any specific topics to be discussed, Ohira said the "Pan-Pacific" foreign ministers' meeting should be held prior to a summit conference of seven Western industrially advanced nations scheduled in Tokyo next June.

"It is only natural for Japan to give special consideration to the Pacific region, just as the United States does to Central and South American nations, West Germany to the European communities, and the Western Europe to African countries," Ohira's policy statement said.

Ohira, a former foreign minister who worked for Japan normalizing relations with China in 1974, called on the United States to make efforts to stabilize the value of the dollar while saying Japan would be ready to cooperate with Washington in its efforts to contain inflation and bolster its currency.

Fukuda, 73, who announced he would not to seek another term as prime minister and president of the LDP following a stinging defeat in a party primary, offered his cooperation to Ohira, political sources said.

Ohira's election as LDP president will be uncontested at the party's convention Friday. He will be named prime minister at a special session of parliament to be convened in early December.

Thorpe Made First Pass at Mother's: Scott

MINEHEAD, England (Reuter) — Former male model Norman Scott told a court today that he and Jeremy Thorpe, former leader of the British Liberal party, began a homosexual relationship in a bedroom at the country home of Thorpe's mother 17 years ago.

Scott, testifying for the first time here, was giving evidence for the prosecution to three magistrates who will ultimately decide whether Thorpe, 49, and three other men should be placed on trial on charges of conspiring to murder the former model.

Scott, 38, who now earns his living by caring for horses at an isolated house in western England, said his close relationship with Thorpe began in November, 1961, when the politician invited him to his mother's home in Oxted, Surrey, in southern England.

Scott said he was working at a riding stable when he had his first brief meeting with Thorpe early in 1960.

"He said if I had any problems of any sort to get in contact with him," Scott said.

Scott, who several times admitted he was confused over dates, described how he and Thorpe drove from the House of Commons to the home of Thorpe's mother.

"On the way, Mr. Thorpe said: 'To make it easier I am going to tell my mother you are part of the camera crew who are going to Malta with me tomorrow'," Scott testified.

Prosecutor Peter Taylor asked Scott to tell the court what happened when he went to his bedroom that night.

"I went to the bedroom that night," Scott said. "I had to take sleeping pills and Jeremy came in with some water for me. He also brought with him a book in case I did not fall asleep straight away." Scott said the book was about homosexual lovers.

"Jeremy came in about an hour or so later. He had on pyjamas and a dressing gown. He just sat on the bed and talked to me. As I explained, I had taken pills and I was quite woozy."

After they had talked for a while, Scott said: "He put his arms around me. Then he got into bed with me."

The prosecutor alleged that Thorpe and the three other men accused with him of conspiracy to murder hired an airline pilot, Andrew Newton, for £10,000 (about $20,000) to silence Scott by killing him.

All four have denied the accusations. Thorpe also denied an additional charge against him that he incited Holmes to murder.

All three lay magistrates have only to decide whether the state case warrants trial by judge and jury in a higher court.

Pickpockets To Be Shot

CAIRO (AP) — Pickpockets in Cairo have become so violent that Egyptian Interior Minister Nabawi Ismail issued police with orders to "shoot at once," the government-owned newspaper Al Gumhouria reported Tuesday.

Pickpockets are said to wield curved knives, and, in some cases, revolvers. Pickpockets who harass pedestrians or resist arrest must be shot at once, were Ismail's orders to his police squads.

FRIENDSHIP OBELISK ERECTED

The structure, called "Signalos," was sculpted by Russian-born Canadian Kosso Eloul.

The 15-foot-high steel statue stands in a traffic circle at Ruben Dario and Campos Eliseos streets. It was described as "a constant reminder of our friendship and co-operation."

Patrons Quaffed Beer-Mix Evidence

When Liquor Control and Licensing Branch inspectors began investigating a claim that U.S. canned beer was being mixed with Canadian draught they failed to turn up any concrete evidence, Vic Woodland, general manager of the licensing branch, said today.

Woodland said, however, that three licensed premises in Vancouver have been issued with warnings because of suspicions that they may have been using up old American stock by mixing it with fresh local beer.

Woodland said the establishments in question were firmly warned that such an action would be a serious offence under the liquor control act.

He said a thorough investigation was undertaken by branch staff after a former bar manager claimed that a Vancouver hotel had been mixing beer.

"We haven't been able to substantiate that it actually did happen . . . but there are some indications that it did take place," said Woodland.

A number of people were interviewed by investigators, he said; and although there were comments that the practice could have taken place, no one testified that they'd actually witnessed the event.

B.C. hotels were stuck with a surplus of American beer when the summer-long beer strike suddenly ended and B.C. breweries went back into production.

The Wizard of Oz Sparkles With That Special Magic

By AUDREY JOHNSON
Times Staff

In every stage show there has to be some kind of magic to capture the audience.

But magic is the key word in such fantasy shows as The Wizard of Oz. Without the element of magic — and not just the obvious kind but a more subtle quality that can and frequently does elude a company — fantasy can be the dullest of entertainments.

Victoria Operatic Society through director Colin Skinner and much of its cast, has invested Wizard with a great deal of pure magic. Now at McPherson Playhouse, it is weaving a spell for capacity audiences of all ages.

Critically speaking there are only two spots where the magic fails. For the rest, everyone concerned has contributed delightfully.

Carole Sabiston's sets are superbly imaginative and delectable to the eye; Kerry-Lynn Krich's choreography is apt and charming, especially the Jitterbugs' scene and the dance of the skeletons and ghosts, done to the irresistible rhythm of Saint-Saens' Danse Macabre.

Stage effects — particularly the cyclone — are well conceived technically and carried out with flair. And also on the technical side, the VOS crew handles scene changes nimbly, an aspect where the magic might easily have faltered.

There is a refreshingly naive quality to the early part of the show, due mostly to a bubbling swarm of young Munchkins giving their all with shrill enthusiasm.

Janet Webb's Dorothy is picture-pretty and sweet as cotton-candy. She dances well and uses to optimum advantage a tuneful small voice. In directing her, Skinner could perhaps have got her to relax more with the part. There is a hint of forcing and a bit too much fussy movement but it is still a pleasing performance.

Her companions are excellent. Top-notch is Bill Johnston as Scarecrow, a wonderfully loose-limbed, fluid interpretation that is consistent throughout. Hugh Taylor is a Tin Woodman with charisma and Bill Nesbitt a suitably deep-voiced and likeable Cowardly Lion.

But the most "bewitching" performance in the show is the vocally, physically and imaginatively brilliant creation of the Wicked Witch of the West by Sylvia Hatchman. It is so delightful that her ultimate demise in her own vat of brew, deserved though it be, is regrettable.

This enjoyable production is well served by an excellent pit orchestra conducted by Howard Denike who uses it sensitively in accompanying the generally small voices.

Two mistakes were made in this area which tore small but regrettable holes in the magic. The Sorceress of the North — the good fairy role — should have fallen to a slight lithe person, preferably a dancer. Eileen Thornton is too substantial and too phlegmatic to be able to create an effect of fantasy.

And then there is the Wizard. The voice issuing from that marvellously contrived image was fine but when the phoney Wizard himself (Jack Wilkinson) emerged, he proved to be too inexperienced an actor to maintain the level of the scene and the finale was slightly flattened as a result.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

The south player bid very poorly in today's deal, and, as a result, arrived at an inferior slam contract. But, had it not been for an excellent defensive false-card by one of the defenders, the contract would have been fulfilled.

Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	2 NT	Pass
6 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ♣.

South's jump to two notrump might well be nominated for the worst bid of the year. Had he bid the diamond suit instead, North-South would undoubtedly have arrived at a respectable six-diamond contract.

Against the six-notrump contract West opened his top club, dummy's ace taking the trick as East signaled encouragement by playing the seven-spot. Next came a low diamond to South's jack, West taking the trick with the ace. A club continuation by West was captured by dummy's king.

As is evident, declarer had just ten sure tricks. And, as is equally evident, the spade suit offered the sole hope for the creation of the two additional tricks needed to fulfill the contract. So, at trick four, South entered his hand via the heart queen and led the deuce of spades and successfully finessed dummy's jack. He now had 11 top winners.

Looking at all four hands, 12 tricks are there for the taking by cashing the spade ace and king. With the adversely held spades being divided 3-3, declarer's fourth spade becomes his slam-going trick.

But when dummy's ace of spades was cashed, West dropped the queen (with the jack having been played. West's queen and ten were equivalent, tied for third place behind the ace and king). Assuming that West had no more spades, declarer now led dummy's remaining spade and finessed his nine-spot against East's presumed ten. West's ten took the setting trick.

At a six-diamond contract, declarer would have had no problem. He simply would have ruffed his fourth spade, for the 12th trick.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): How far up the ladder do you want to ascend? The question is put to you. Take time to consider time, emotions, price to be paid, you could be drawn between family and business — key is to balance, reason, create atmosphere of harmony within buzz-saw of dissension.

IF NOVEMBER 30 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have potential, enthusiasm, optimism and a problem concerning "the way you look." Birth pattern indicats a weight problem — or the body of a model. There seems little in-between. Personality is beautiful — and so is your sense of adventure and humor. Your intellectual curiosity also is a thing of beauty. You travel, write and appreciate art. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play key roles in your life. Major domestic adjustment due in December. May was possibly your most memorable month of 1978. In 1979, you will be on more solid footing as theories are put into practice.

We have 4889 for the game today. One 9, two 8's, one 4. Using all four each time, but no other digits at all, you form expressions for the consecutive numbers from one up.

Any arithmetical signs may be used, but no summation or factorial symbols, and no words. Don't forget decimals, regular and repeater, also powers and roots. For example 89+8-4 is a solution for 93.

Before the Judge

Defence lawyer Patrick Sweeney made the election on behalf of 31-year-old Brian George Angus, 1145 Hadfield, and 34-year-old Stanley James Petne, 860 Carey. They were charged with breaking and entering McGill and Orme, 30 Burnside West, and Judge Harold Alder set the preliminary hearing for Jan. 24.

Petne was denied bail Friday by Judge Blake Allan and Sweeney decided not to apply for Angus' release at this time.

Fined for drinking-driving were: James Young, 53, of 450 Dallas, $500; and Ernest Neil Green, 63, of 2001 Fernwood, $100.

In addition, Green was placed on six months' probation and ordered to perform 50 hours of community service work.

Man Given Probation For Break-in at Store

A man found with a girl companion inside a store at midnight last Feb. 21 was placed on 12 months probation by Judge D.H. Campbell in county court Tuesday.

Charged with him was Anne Louise Creally, also 18, who was found not guilty.

Court was told police were called to the shop at Hillside and Shelbourne after nearby resident John Fisher said he heard breaking glass. He saw someone at a rear window of the bakery and heard conversation apparently with someone inside.

Constable David Mann said he approached the window, became aware of two persons inside the shop and ordered them to "freeze."

Constable Peter Lawson said when they were escorted outside they said: "We didn't break the glass. It was broken. We just went in."

Cindy Kipp, 18, who had been with the others until shortly before police arrived, testified that DeMontigny had said, "I found a broken window. Let's go and check it out." Kipp said she went on home after seeing police cars arriving.

All three had been to a party in Gordon Head that night, and had come back to Hillside by bus. They intended to walk a short distance to their homes from Shelbourne, but first wanted to use a washroom at a service station across the street.

Creally testified she had gone into the bakery only to satisfy her curiosity, that she had no intention of stealing.

Police Thwart Feast

A spokesman said the boy had gathered sausages, pizzas, steaks, onions, mushrooms and cigarettes when he was surprised by officers.

Police said the two, aged 15 and 16, have also been charged with breaking into Brady's Fish and Chips, 20 Burnside West, last Sunday and stealing some alcohol. In addition they've been charged with a house break-in in Gordon Head last week.

They will appear in family court later in the week.

So Much for B.C. Study of Megavitamin Theory

A government-commissioned medical committee established nearly a year ago to look into the megavitamin theory of disease control held one meeting early in the year and has drifted into limbo.

Its only conclusion was that the investigation of the effects of huge doses of vitamins on schizophrenia, multiple sclerosis and hyperactivity in children is far too great a task for a single province to undertake.

But committee member Dr. Abram Hoffer, a Victoria psychiatrist who says vitamins help control schizophrenia, still hopes the government will fund megavitamin research. Hoffer became well-known for his treatment of schizophrenia with massive doses of vitamins while practising in Saskatchewan. He drew large crowds on the lecture circuit.

An Alberta government-sponsored review of all available information on megavitamins two years ago didn't draw any conclusions but Hoffer said it strongly urged universities and research facilities continue to probe possible effects of vitamins on disease.

Committee chairman Dr. Anthony Larsen, B.C.'s epidemiologist, said the group was formed as a short-term committee to look into the matter and advise Health Minister Bob McClelland what should be done.

At its meeting, the committee decided if the problem was to be looked into, one province couldn't do it alone.

They advised McClelland it was a task to be shared jointly by the provinces or undertaken by the federal government.

"If any government gets involved it will need a competent research group working over a long period. And it won't be cheap, I can assure you," Larsen said.

McClelland raised the issue at a joint federal-provincial health minister's conference in September, but at that time everyone was talking about the cutbacks the federal government had just announced, Larsen said.

Ministers were concerned with finding ways to maintain existing programs and the megavitamin issue didn't have primary priority, he said.

Legislation in that state has also forced insurance carriers to cover the cost of treatment — the issue which initiated the B.C. government study last year.

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm was questioned in the house why patients on megavitamin programs were disqualified from Pharmacare benefits which normally cover drug expenses of more than $25 in one year.

Pharmacare funds only generally recognized programs of treatment — a status that megavitamins didn't, and still don't have.

"The government could not endorse a program as controversial as this without knowing all the facts," Vander Zalm said when announcing the study last December.

PARADISE ALLEY

A Very Rocky Follow-Up For Sylvester Stallone

Sylvester Stallone told an interviewer that while playing the part of Cosmo Carboni in his movie Paradise Alley, he ate nothing but shellfish to lower his intelligence level. Eliminating carbohydrates from his diet not only made him sluggish enough to play the part of a Hell's Kitchen bum, however, it also affected his directing.

A movie review by Lorraine Locherty Times Staff

Paradise Alley co-stars . . . all wet

Since Stallone wrote, directed, starred and even sang the title song in Paradise Alley, he deserves all the blame. Not only is it a monument to the man's collossal ego, it is a transparent take-off on the Rocky theme: the underdog takes on the oppressive forces of fate and circumstance and through incredible willpower and courage twists them to his favor.

This time the ring where the inevitable bone-crunching climax takes place has changed from boxing to wrestling.

Stallone, like Howard Cosell, is a legend in his own mind. He knows he is a superstar; now he just has to convince everybody else. So Paradise Alley is two almost hours of Sylvester Stallone the comedian, Sylvester Stallone the dramatic actor, Sylvester Stallone grimacing, rolling his eyeballs, being lovable, acting angry and running the gamut of emotions from A to B (B stands for Badly). Stallone is a graduate of the school of overacting.

His character is the focal point of the movie, which is about three Italian brothers living in Hell's Kitchen, New York in 1946. Cosmo is a smart-ass con-man trying to hustle his brothers out of poverty. But Cosmo is really a good guy underneath the rough exterior, it's just that none of his schemes are working out. Cosmo is posing as a mutilated war veteran begging for nickels in the streets, younger brother Victor is an iceman, and his older brother Lenny, who is really a disabled vet, packages stiffs in the local mortuary.

Cosmo decides Victor's muscles are their ticket out of the slums, so he tries turning his brother into a wrestler. Victor is played by Lee Canalito, a professional heavyweight boxer who was trained by Angelo Dundee, Muhammad Ali's trainer. But Victor, who is 6' 5" tall and weighs about 260 pounds, is a gentle giant with a pet canary and a disposition to match Bambi's.

The characters that inhabit Stallone's version of Hell's Kitchen have names like Burp, Rat, Franky the Thumper and Sticky. They are like the crooks of '40s gangster films softened with the sentiment of movies like A Pocket Full of Miracles and Guys and Dolls; a combination that could only have come from Stallone's fervent imagination. The villain of the piece, Sticky, played by Kevin Conway, is a cross between George Raft and Jimmy Cagney.

The movie is salvaged somewhat by Stallone's whimsical comic touch and the creative photography of Laszlo Kovacs. Kovacs' visual interpretation of Hell's Kitchen enhances Stallone's colorful characters and includes some interesting special effects. The climactic wrestling match is a spectacle that outdoes the final boxing scene in Rocky.

Armand Assante, who was picked for the role of Lenny because he looks like Stallone, does a creditable job of playing an introverted intellectual. Canalito, who wants a shot at the world heavyweight title, better stick to boxing. Ann Archer as Annie O'Sherlock, and Joyce Ingalls as Bunchie, the hooker with the heart of gold, play the love interests of Lenny and Cosmo. They don't have much of a chance with the meagre parts Stallone has written for them, but manage to struggle along. Singer-composer Tom Waits has an interesting cameo appearance as a deteriorating piano player named Mumbles who works in a dive called Mahon's Bar.

Stallone has potential as a comedian. He has a good sense of timing and a lot of the scenes are genuinely funny. They would be funnier if he wasn't so cold and calculating: Stallone has reduced movie-making to a formula. One part humor, one part pathos, heavy on drama, a little love and lots of schmaltz. But formulas don't always work, because they lack spontaneity.

Kirby Jailed For 20 Years

LAS VEGAS — It appears comedian George Kirby, who once allegedly boasted that show business was a good cover for narcotics dealing, will have a captive audience for some years to come.

Kirby, 52, already appealing a 10-year federal prison term for selling narcotics, pleaded guilty in September to state charges of selling cocaine and giving heroin to an undercover agent.

Saying Kirby as a former addict must have known "the evils of heroin," District Court Judge Carl Christensen Tuesday sentenced him to two concurrent terms of 20 years on the state charges.

"A friend got me into it," Kirby, 52, explained to the court. "It was an opportunity to get some money to catch up on my bills. I am no trafficker in drugs."

Kirby, who describes himself as the "first black standup comedian," had been free on his own recognizance on the state charges, but was taken into custody after sentencing.

At Kirby's trial in federal court last December on charges of selling heroin, undercover agent Ralph Orduno testified Kirby told him it was easy for him to transport narcotics because airport guards pass show business celebrities through checkpoints without inspecting their luggage.

"He said he was involved with organized crime," the agent testified, "that he was married to an Italian girl who was with one of the families."

The entertainer had been free on $50,000 bail pending an appeal of his federal conviction.

"I am embarrassed and ashamed of being in the situation I am in now," Kirby told the judge, denying he was "a trafficker in drugs," but conceding he was an addict 20 years ago.

The judge ordered the state sentence to run concurrently with the federal term. Kirby's lawyer, Robert Archie, indicated he would try to have Kirby serve his time in a federal prison instead of the century-old Nevada State Prison in Carson City.

What Strange Customs William Faces

STAMFORD, Conn. — William Keavy began to worry about his suitcase as his jetliner made its approach into the Moscow airport.

He imagined customs officers peering into the bag. But instead of customs officials, he found a Russian limousine waiting for him at the airport. He was whisked off the plane ahead of all other passengers and taken to meet his hosts.

"I was afraid they would think it strange for me to be carrying three dozen breast prostheses," the plastic surgeon said.

Although Keavy lectured and demonstrated his profession during both visits, the main purpose was to do reconstructive surgery on a prominent man. Soviet Union officials, however, don't want the man identified.

Keavy said he was surprised with the popularity of facelifts, nose operations and similar surgery in Russia.

The biggest contrast between North American and Soviet plastic surgery, Keavy said, appears to be cost. Keavy said a face-lift in his country may cost $1,500 to $3,000, but the Soviet government-subsidized operations cost the patient the equivalent of about $75.

Keavy has visited Moscow's Institute of Cosmotology the last two years. He said he was surprised to find a hospital-clinic with 12 surgeons handling about 15 to 20 plastic-surgery cases a day.

ATTACKER'S IDENTITY SCRAWLED IN BLOOD

NEW YORK — Certain he would die after having his throat slashed during a robbery, Vincente Gomez dipped a finger in his own blood and painted the name of his attacker on a bedsheet and again on a piece of paper, authorities say.

Justice Howard Goldfusss of New York state Supreme Court ordered that Rodriguez continue to be held without bail until sentencing Jan. 15.

KENSINGTON KING SOLD TO MALAYSIA

OTTAWA (CP) — Forty-four episodes of King of Kensington have been sold to the Malaysian television system, and eight deals made with independent TV networks in Britain for sales of The Beachcombers, the CBC export sales division has announced.

Twenty episodes of The Collaborators were sold to Australia.

'Meaningful Relationship' or Cash Deal?

United Press International

"What makes women so attractive to me personally is the element of danger when you fool around with them," Marvin said.

"They are a constant sexual threat. Why did Samson fall asleep? For the first time in his life he relaxed — and after that he couldn't push down temples."

After his first marriage ended in divorce, Marvin "fooled around" for six years with an aspiring singer named Michelle Triola. They lived together, much of the time at a beach house in Malibu, from 1964 until 1970 when they parted and Marvin married again.

On Thursday, a Los Angeles court is expected to set a date for a jury trial of a suit brought by Miss Triola seeking half of Marvin's wealth, estimated at $1 million. Now 45 (Marvin is 54), she says that although they never married they had an oral contract that the Oscar-winning actor would share all his earthly goods with her.

The suit might be regarded as just another of Hollywood's minor episodes except that the nation's lifestyle now is marked by acceptance of "meaningful relationships" sans marriage and the outcome could become a legal landmark affecting thousands of people who live together and break up.

There are already three other similar suits involving show business personalities.

Rock star Alice Cooper is being sued for half of his estimated $4 million fortune by Cynthia Lang, a high school "princess" who says she lived with him for seven years before they parted in 1973.

Actor Nick Nolte, who gained prominence in his role in Rich Man, Poor Man, faces a suit brought by Karen Eklund, also known as Luigi. She alleges they also lived together for seven years before they separated in 1977. His wealth is estimated at $8 million.

And a male model named Randal Jones, about 30, is suing for a share of the estate of the late actor James Daly, a star of television's Medical Centre. Daly died last July at the age of 59 leaving an estimated $1 million-$2 million.

Milk-Pricing Ripoff Charge Denied

Cowichan NDP MLA Barbara Wallace Tuesday denied the suggestion B.C. consumers are paying eight cents more for a quart of milk than they should.

The Cowichan member said the cost of buying into the federally-regulated quota system is borne by the farmer and not passed along to the consumer.

The cost of milk is exactly what it should be, she said.

Speculation on the limited number of available quotas has driven up the price to $150 a pound for milk, the chairman of the Select Standing Committe on Agriculture said Monday.

Shuswap Socred MLA Len Bawtree said a producer trying to get established in the industry has to borrow $100,000 to $200,000 just for his quota licences.

Servicing that debt adds about eight cents onto every quart of milk, he said.

But Wallace, who also sits on the committee, said Bawtree's figures are misleading, and in fact another report soon to be released by the same committee contains statistics proving the cost of milk quotas is not passed along to the consumer.

When new producers add the cost of quotas to their other costs they come out behind because the amount they receive for their produce doesn't equal all their costs.

Wallace said everyone agrees the price of getting into the quota system is far too high and must be cut down, but it affects only the producers, not the consumer.

Risking Blow To Vote Base, Tory Leader Backs Sale Of BC Rail

Tory leader Vic Stephens Tuesday came out in support of the McKenzie Royal Commission that recommended the provincial government get rid of the B.C. Railway.

He said while his position might be unpopular with northern voters where the Conservative party has historically been strong, Stephens said he is more concerned with the waste of money than with the loss of votes.

Stephens said he doesn't think he will lose votes for taking a position that will save taxpayers millions of dollars.

'I have more faith in the people of B.C. than the Socreds or NDP," he said.

A Conservative government would abandon the Fort Nelson line and try and negotiate the sale of the rest of it to the CNR as the commission recommended, Stephens said.

Yarrows To Hire 100 Men

Yarrows Ltd. will hire 100 men in December to repair the Alaska ferry Columbia in a contract worth about $100,000.

Work will be completed by Christmas.

"Our staff had fallen to about 175, which is quite low for us, but it is starting to pick up now."

The Alaska system will have to pay 50 per cent duty on repairs and inspections in the Yarrows yard.

Mini Mountain Of Fake Rocks

Rock and Waterscape Systems, Inc., is building the simulated rocks for a miniature mountain, complete with three waterfalls, to be built across two swimming pools in the Bahamas.

"We lift rock impressions off the cliffs by pressing latex skins into the rock, then painting them with a special substance so they'll retain that shape," says Ross Dietzel, the company's local plant foreman.

"It's better to use God's own designs than to hand-sculpt our own, which is what we used to do," he says. "Obviously, using natural formations will produce more natural (simulated) rocks."

The firm, founded by Los Angeles fireman Julian George, has built miniature mountains and wildlife habitats at hotels and zoos in Denver, Washington, Omaha, San Diego, Acapulco and Hawaii.

The local plant was opened last year by Dietzel and other Rock and Waterscape employees who already had worked for a year at the National Zoo in Washington.

"In the two years we've worked there, we've constructed 13 different full-scale exhibits, including several bear caves and dens, a beaver habitat, a seal exhibit and more," the plant foreman says.

"We must learn something about each animal's lifestyle and ability to climb, jump or manoeuvre before we construct a zoo habitat."

Foreigners Flocking to Thailand Monastery

By DENIS D. GRAY

PA PONG MONASTERY, Thailand (AP) — Stephen Saslav, head-shaven, a gaunt white frame in orange robes, sits statue-still on the floor of the prayer hall near the two dangling skeletons and a baby fetus preserved in formaldenhyde.

More than seven years ago he had headed to Asia, leaving behind college, parents and fun weekends in his native New York City. Passing through Thailand Saslav thought he would sample the austerity of a Buddhist monastery "for six months, seven at most."

Now he is under indefinite vows to abstain from sex, alcohol and possesson of all but a few personal items. Having been ordained monk Santa Citto in this remote forest monastery, he has joined an increasing number of foreigners, chiefly North Americans, Western Europeans and Australians, who have come to the land of 25,000 temples and 220,000 monks seeking the Buddhist way to peace and wisdom.

Abbot Chah, charismatic, simple-living and widely respected, has attracted many of the estimated 200 foreign monks in Thailand to Pa Pong. Having started branch monasteries in France and England, Chah believes that a genuine interest in Buddhism is emerging in the West. The foreign monks say Chah has a rare talent in communicating its teachings despite his poor command of English.

The abbot has even appointed an American to head a nearby monastery. Gordon Kappell, 30, a former helicopter pilot in Vietnam, and his fellow foreigners are said to be almost pampered by the local villagers, who, in traditional manner, drop to the ground and clasp their hands in veneration as the often towering Caucasians pass by with their shaved heads and eyebrows, bare feet and begging bowls.

Set off from the main roads and towns in Thailand's most underdeveloped region, Pcupong Moastery encompasses 160 acres of tropical forest inhabited by wild birds, deer and squirrels. The monks live singly in simple wooden huts perched on stilts and reached by narrow footpaths through the trees. There is no electricity, no tap water and no sounds save those from the forest.

HOW TO WRITE

CLASSIFIED ACTION

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If nnu have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

'. . . IT IS A MIRACLE'

KENDAL, England (CP) — A 74-year-old woman who was crippled with arthritis has tossed away her walking sticks and now walks unaided. She believes she was cured by divine healing.

"I have suffered from arthritis for 20 years and for the last six years have been able to walk only a few yards with the aid of sticks," says Doris Lancaster of Haverthwaite, near this historic northwest town.

Mrs. Lancaster believes she was cured when evangelist Peter Scothern, 55, prayed for her at a service in St. Anne's Anglican Church, Haverthwaite.

"I just couldn't believe I was cured. I can stand again now, which I haven't been able to do for a long time, and I can get upstairs without having to use my hands. It is a miracle."

Mrs. Lancaster was one of 35 persons who approached the altar when invited to seek spiritual and physical healing. She says Scothern prayed with them and gave personal counselling before the laying on of hands.

"I felt a spiritual warmth," she says, "and it seemed to travel right through my whole body."

Rev. David Grant, vicar of Haverthwaite, says he invited Scothern to conduct a three-day healing ministry at the church while the evangelist was touring the counties of Cumbria and Lancashire in the Lake District.

"I have been preaching about the wonders of spiritual healing for some time," Grant says. "What happened in my church in full sight of the congregation is proof that God does heal when people have faith."

Scothern says he has been engaged in spiritual healing for more than 30 years.

"I believe Jesus Christ works through us to perform the miracle of healing. He is the channel which enables power to reach the people, but He needs the quality of faith."

Alberta Scorns Further Oil Talks

Times News Services

Alberta does not intend to enter new negotiations on energy pricing if agreement is not reached at the first ministers meeting in Ottawa this week, Alberta Energy Minister Don Getty said in Edmonton.

Provincial premiers meeting in Ottawa declined Tuesday to support an Alberta-Ottawa proposal to cancel the Jan. 1 $1-a-barrel increase—three cents a gallon — in favor of a $1 increase on July 1 and Jan. 1, 1980.

Getty said Tuesday night he can not think of a good reason for the province to negotiate a second compromise after reaching agreement with the federal government on a plan to postpone a Jan. 1 increase in exchange for two increases later in the year.

The federal and Alberta governments, however, agreed on principles for offering lower natural gas prices in new markets to expand use of the fuel in eastern Quebec and the Maritimes.

The lower prices would be available only to markets east of the Alberta border.

Meanwhile, Quebec and British Columbia made it clear at the conference Tuesday they're not prepared to turn over complete control of programs to shore up farm incomes to the federal government.

Don Phillips, B.C. development minister, said his province wants to be allowed to maintain its farm income insurance programs. B.C. farmers face higher operating costs than producers elsewhere, he said.

Quebec Agriculture Minister Jean Garon said provincial governments should have a role in deciding how farm income support pro-

The other eight provinces have generally accepted a federal proposal to change the current farm income stabilization program to provide higher payments to farmers in times of low prices. It's a voluntary plan which farmers will have to pay into.

Agriculture Minister Eugene Whelan said later he is sure B.C. will join and the plan could operate without Quebec.

Provincial premiers also expressed fears Tuesday that the issue of reducing government red tape will be studied to death while little is done to improve the situation.

After agreeing at their last economic meeting in February that an excess of government regulation is strangling small business and interfering in the lives of citizens, the first ministers instructed the Economic Council of Canada to investigate ways of reducing the red tape burden.

When the council submitted its preliminary report to the ministers at their economic summit Tuesday, a number expressed disappoimtment that no program for freeing the private sector of the inhibiting regulation has emerged.

It said it needed more time to come up with recommendations for reducing the burden of regulation.

Manitoba Premier Sterling Lyon, who led the 20-minute discussion of government regulation, said he was disappointed the follow-up from the last conference was so slow.

He urged the federal advisory agency to come up with recommendations—even tentative ones—as quickly as possible.

8 YEARS IN EXILE

FLQ Pair 'Home For Christmas'

Jacques and Louise Cossette–Trudel

Times News Services

QUEBEC — Jacques and Louise Cossette-Trudel, wanted for the 1970 FLQ kidnapping of British trade commissioner James Cross, plan to be back in Quebec for Christmas, a government spokesman said today.

But the spokesman for Quebec Justice Minister Marc-Andre Bedard said the exact date of their return has not yet been set.

The couple are among five members of an FLQ cell who were flown to Cuba eight years ago in exchange for the release of Cross, who was held for 59 days.

The Cossette-Trudels, complaining of homesickness, have spoken of returning for several years.

In Ottawa, Andre Simard, an official of the external affairs department, was quoted as saying he had heard about the Cossette-Trudels' "intention to return," although he could not confirm any date.

The Quebec spokesman added that once the couple arrives at Montreal's Mirabel Airport Quebec justice department officials plan to formally lay charges against them arising from their alleged participation in the Cross kidnapping.

Within days after their arrival they will appear in court at which time a trial date will be set and they will find out whether they will be released on bail.

The Cossette-Trudels have been living in France with their two children for a number of years and first expressed the desire to come home about a year ago.

In a letter to a Montreal newspaper several weeks ago, they finally abandoned their long-standing demand for an amnesty, saying they were ready to stand trial.

The couple have warned that, although they are ready to face charges, they will refuse to inform or provide prosecution evidence against any other FLQ members in criminal cases.

There have been reports—as yet unconfirmed—that Cross, his wife and his maid have all identified a photograph of Mr. X, naming him as one of the kidnappers.

Lougheed Inquiry Rejected

EDMONTON (CP) — Attorney-General Jim Foster said Tuesday no investigation will be made into Premier Peter Lougheed's free flights on Air Canada and CP Air because there is no evidence the flights were given or accepted in return for favors to the airlines by the government.

Lougheed admitted Monday he had accepted some free flights by the two national airlines and used them to take vacations.

Meanwhile, Alberta New Democratic Party leader Grant Notley has proposed legislation specifically banning MLAs, cabinet ministers and the premier from accepting gifts.

Notley said the Saskatchewan government has legislation governing the acceptance of gifts by elected officials and a similar New Brunswick law is due to take force soon.

B.C.'s Environment Minister Jim Nielsen said Tuesday his government does not have any rules against ministers accepting free trips on airlines.

He said he would find it inappropriate to accept a free trip from an airline for holiday purposes, but does not feel accepting free trips leaves a politician open to pressure from airlines.

The provincial secretary's ministry confirmed Tuesday that all members of the B.C. legislature are issued free passes by the provincially-owned B.C. Ferry Corp., Vancouver Island Coach Lines and Pacific Stage Lines as well as CP Rail, the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway, B.C. Coast Service and Canadian National Railways.

CP Rail and CNR passes are valid on all lines for ministers but members are limited to free transportation within the province, a spokesman said.

UNITED WAY SCRAMBLING

The United Way of GreaterVictoria had raised $860,000 or 93 per cent of its $926,500 goal by noon Tuesday and hopes to reach its objective by Friday, executive director Stuart Drummond said today.

"Every one is out there working," he said. "They're scrambling all over the place trying to come up with the additional money."

He said the final report meeting will be held at noon Friday in the wardroom of CFB Esquimalt.

Unemployment Benefit Pinch Faces Quitters

Times News Services

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is considering toughening unemployment insurance rules affecting persons who collect benefits after quitting jobs voluntarily, Employment Minister Bud Cullen said Tuesday.

Cullen also said Canada Works job-creation grants will be cut from constituencies where the unemployment rate is less than eight per cent.

Denying unemployment benefits to quitters has been rejected in the past because "we would put the employees at the mercy of the employers."

The senior officials were responding at a Commons manpower committee meeting to Paul McCrossan (PC—York Scarborough) who said benefits should be denied to persons who quit before two or three years on a job.

He said this would be a better way to cut unemployment insurance costs than measures currently proposed by the government. The measures are being studied by MPs in the manpower committee.

Government figures say last year about 220,000 individuals voluntarily quit their jobs without "just cause" such as illness and received about $450 million in unemployment insurance benefits. That's an average $2,100 each.

"That's a much more fruitful area to go after," McCrossan said.

"This is an area we have considered and I can't say we have totally ruled it out," Cullen said. He said an advisory committee in his department is studying ways to get at quitters.

Under current rules, persons who quit without just cause lose six weeks of insurance benefits as a penalty.

Explaining the remark about sexual exploitation in an interview later, Manion cited cases of a series of women quitting the same job for the same employer.

He said the women refused to say why they quit. But when the manpower centre investigates, "eventually some of the people break down and tell us about real or imagined sexual approaches by the employer."

On the Canada Works grant cutback, Cullen told MPs in the Commons manpower committee: "We're tilting Canada Works into areas of high unemployment."

Under the current Canada Works formula, every constituency is granted a minimum $150,000 a year for job creation, regardless of the unemployment rate in the region.

Extra Canada Works funds are spent in constituencies where the unemployment rate is at least seven per cent. Ridings with high Indian and Metis populations get special additional grants.

Trio Arrested For Abduction

Two young men and a 16-year-old juvenile are in custody in connection with an assault and abduction in Saanich on Monday.

Police said the three have been charged with unlawful confinement, assault causing bodily harm and breaking and entering.

They were to appear in court later today.

The charges arise out of an incident involving 17-year-old Clinton Dobie who was beaten up and dragged from his home at 1563 San Juan early Monday afternoon.

The suspects were picked up by city police Tuesday night in a 2500-block Douglas Street apartment. A police spokesman said the door to the apartment had to be forced open after the suspects slammed it when officers approached.

Dobie was driven off by his assailants but managed to get free and return home early that evening.

Police said the youth received cuts and bruises but was otherwise not seriously injured in the attack.

FOOD COSTLY 'JUST IN MIND'

John Sokol, a York University professor who lectures on food and also owns a cattle farm, said consumers are not as aware of the price they pay for items they can purchase with a credit card as they are about food costs because they have to pay in cash for groceries.

"He (the consumer) can buy tires for his car with a credit card and somehow it doesn't seem so bad when he pays it back a month later," Sokol said Monday at a meeting of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture.

"But he has to go to the bank to get cash to pay for food and, when he takes out $50 for food and has to go back for more money the next day, he complains."

Consumers should not complain about food prices because they could cut their bills considerably by eating less meat and avoiding fresh, imported vegetables and organic foods, Sokol said.

"Eating more potatoes and carrots would be better for people," he said. "I believe we eat too much meat."

Sokol said later in an interview that Canadians will be paying about 15 per cent more for their food, plus increases caused by inflation, within the next five years.

"Canada's farmers have to get better returns on their labor and investments or they're going to quit farming," he said.

"One of the real dangers is that if we don't start paying more for food soon, large corporations will take over farming in this country as individual farmers give up."

Community Grant Plan Unveiled by Ottawa

OTTAWA (CP) — Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet Tuesday unveiled a long-awaited and much-discussed $400-million grant program to provide community services across the country over the next two years.

Ouellet said $150 million will be awarded to the provinces January 1, 1979, with another $250 million the following year, pending written agreement with provincial governments.

Estimates for 1979 provide $15.2 million for British Columbia, $4.2 million for Newfoundland, $0.9 million for Prince Edward Island, $5.5 million for Nova Scotia $4.2 million for New Brunswick, $47 million for Quebec, $51 million for Ontario, $6.5 million for Manitoba, $4.6 million for Saskatchewan and $10.6 million for Alberta.

The funds will go to municipalities for such projects as sewage treatment facilities, water supply systems, day care centres, recreation buildings and neighborhood improvement plans.

The minister said the program will be introduced in the House of Commons next week. He made the announcement following a meeting of Commons committee on housing.

He said the program will provide increased flexibility and wider latitude to the provinces and their municipalities in using federal funds.

Troops in Control

Bread Price Increase At Least 7¢: Bakers

OTTAWA (CP) — The cost of a loaf of bread will increase at least seven cents in January as the result of the withdrawl of a federal consumer subsidy, bakers and consumers association spokesmen said today.

They disputed a five-cent-a-loaf increase that Wheat Board Minister Otto Lang said will occur as a result of the ending of a subsidy paid to farmers in exchange for a fixed domestic wheat price.

And they said the price increase could be as much as 10 cents a loaf by next summer.

Charles Tisdall, managing director of the Bakery Council of Canada, said the price was expected to jump three cents to five cents a loaf anyway in 1979 because of higher wage and energy costs.

Tisdall said in a telephone interview from Toronto the subsidy removal will just add to the costs bakers must pass on to the grocery shopper.

Barb Sulzenko of the Consumers Association of Canada said the federal government "should realize food prices are a serious problem and try retarding increases rather than encouraging them."

Tisdall and Sulzenco said their groups were not consulted by the government about the possible increase even though the government's proposals for a national food strategy promises such consultation.

Lang said at a news conference the government is ending a subsidy under which millers paid $3.25 a bushel for bread wheat even when world wheat prices were higher.

Lang said millers have agreed not to raise prices until wheat now being delivered to them is used. The millers have also agreed only to pass on "real costs increases."

What Ottawa is doing is stopping a subsidy it paid to the Canadian wheat board when wheat prices rose to more than $3.55 a bushel.

Lang said the subsidy benefitted consumers because it held down wheat prices to millers but allowed the wheat board to pay farmers the full price for their wheat.

Earlier, in the Commons, Warren Allmand, consumer and corporate affairs minister, said food companies may be summoned before the federal government to explain why their profits have been soaring.

Allmand made the statement amid opposition accusations that he has stood by idlely like "a toothless tiger" while food companies ripped off consumers.

The MPs based their charge on a report released Monday showing that profits per unit of output in the food and beverage industry rose by 63 per cent between the first and third quarters of this year.

'Democracy' Strikes Peking

The Globe and Mail
(Special to The Times)

PEKING — With shouts of "Long live democracy" and "We will never turn back," more than 6,000 people marched from the Hsi Tan poster wall to Tien An Men square Tuesday night — twice the size of the crowd that made the pilgrimage the night before. (See earlier story on page 32).

If there was any doubt about the spontaneity of the proceedings during the past few days, it was removed this time when it became readily apparent that the movement for greater democracy in China is without any leaders and at the moment has no goal other than to shout brave slogans to a willing crowd.

The most anyone got to an explicit instruction was a statement from a young electrical worker who stood up in front of the martyrs' monument in the centre of Tien An Men — battery megaphone in hand — and said:

"There has never been a better chance to say what we think than now. Don't let it pass. Take the spirit of this meeting and the spirit of Hsi Tan democracy wall to your units so that it will grow."

For the most part, the rest of the gathering was taken up with excited readings of the lead article of Tuesday's People's Daily, which quoted Vice-Premier Teng Hsiao-ping's enthusiastic support of wall posters and lively debates. The statement came in an account of his meeting with members of the visiting delegation of the Japanese Socialist party.

One of the most amusing spectacles was the sight of Western correspondents passing out their business cards — English on one side, Chinese on the other — to anyone who showed a spark of independence. A lot of cards went out. Since these cards include what is surely the first phone numbers of Westerners these Chinese have ever had, the phone lines should be busy the next few days.

I know because I got a jump on everyone five days earlier by placing a big-character poster up to find a lost ring. It included my phone number and life at the Globe and Mail bureau has not been quite the same since. It is not that there has been such a deluge of calls, but for the
